P R E F A C E.

THE Grecian Antiquities of Lambert Bos having been lately reprinted in England, and a large impression already disposed of, several heads of schools have intimated that a translation of the original would greatly increase its utility: this is now offered to the public, and particularly recommended to those who superintend the education of youth. It is indeed admirably adapted to initiate the youthful student into a knowledge of the manners and institutions of the ancient Greeks, without which it is absolutely impossible to understand their writings. The multifarious topics on which it treats, are so perspicuously arranged, so minutely, yet so concisely explained, that the book itself may very properly be denominated an explanatory index. To students at the universities this excellent little treatise will be found an invaluable companion. To those of them whose various academical pursuits forbid a more frequent perusal of the larger works, our author will serve as a faithful remembrancer. To others who confine their attention more especially to the Greek classics, the references and authorities will open a wide field for future research.

The text, or larger type, is a translation of the Antiquities as they were originally written in Latin by Lambert Bos. This may be read either with or without the notes of Leisner; which immediately follow the text, and besides giving the authorities for every thing Bos has asserted, contain a large portion of new matter. The whole is enriched with the more recent observations of Professor Zeune: these are distinguished from Leisner's by being enclosed in brackets. The authorities, for the sake of brevity, remain in Latin.

It must, however, be allowed that Bos has omitted some subjects which may very properly be considered essential to form a complete treatise on Grecian Antiquities. To supply, therefore, this deficiency without interfering with our author's arrangement, an Appendix has been added; which consists of selections from Potter and others. These, for the most part, have been inserted as they are condensed by Cleveland in his Epitome of Grecian Antiquities, published in America. The chapters on the ἘΦΟΡΟΙ, and Education at Sparta, were chiefly compiled from Cragius, de Republica Lacedæmoniorum; the tables of money, weights, and measures, from Dr. Arbuthnot. It was deemed unnecessary to increase the bulk of the work by subjoining the authorities to the Appendix, as they may easily be consulted in the originals.

As to the translation, it was at first intended only to have reprinted that by Mr. Stockdale, with the addition of Zeune's notes: but this was afterwards found impracticable, as the language, generally, was too antiquated, and the translation itself incorrect. We have, however, made his the basis of the present work, although nearly one half has been translated afresh. The occasional additions in the body of the work from Heeren, Boeckh, &c. are marked with an obelisk in brackets. The translator, already under great obligations to Mr. Bailey, Editor of the Latin Lexicon of Facciolati and Forcellini, as his preceptor, is now still further indebted to him for many valuable hints in the present publication. Indeed, it was he who first suggested it, and by whose advice it was undertaken.

The favourable reception which the Latin reprint has met with, induces us to submit this translation to the literary part of the community, in the hope of having contributed our mite, at least, towards facilitating the knowledge of Grecian Antiquities.

BOS'S ANTIQUITIES OF GREECE.

PART I.

RELIGION OF THE GREEKS.

IN treating of the ancient manners and institutions, both public and private, sacred, civil, military, and domestic, of Greece in general, and of Athens in particular, we shall give the preference in our arrangement to the sacred. But it may be proper, before we enter upon this subject, to premise somewhat concerning the situation of Greece, &c.

CHAP. I.

DESCRIPTION OF GREECE, ATTICA, AND ATHENS.

I. Ancient European Greece^a is bounded on the west by Epirus; on the north by Macedonia, and part of the Ægean sea; on the east by the Ægean, and on the south by the Ionian sea.^b The country was called Ἑλλάς,^c and the inhabitants, Ἕλληνες, from one Hellen.^d

(^a) Ancient Greece, in Europe, extended to the Ægean sea, ἐντὸς Αἰγαίου; and in Asia, beyond that sea, πέραν Αἰγαίου. Paus. Eliac. I. European Greece was subdivided into Greece on this side of the Ionian sea; and into Greece beyond that sea; ἐντὸς Ἰωνίου, and πέραν Ἰωνίου. European Greece was called great Greece, μεγάλη Ἑλλάς: Athen. XII, 5, p. 523. Strabo, VI. Plin. III, 5, and 10. Liv. XXXI, 7. Ovid. Fast. IV, 64. Cic. de Orat. II, 37. The name of great Greece is taken in another sense in Ovid. Heroid. XVI, 340. This great Greece is the citerior Greece of Liv. VII, 26; the Grecia subcisiva of Apuleius, Apol. p. 294. Porph. Vit. Pythag. p. 26. But no one has better ascertained Græcia magna, and more clearly marked its limits than Mazochius, Comment. in æneas tabulas Heracleenses, Neapol. 1754, p. 1, diatrib. I, c. 1—9.

(^b) The learned differ with regard to the limits of Ancient Greece. Palmerius, Græc. Antiq. c. I. Dionys. Perieg. v. 398. Strabo, VIII. Mela, II, 3. [†Its greatest length from north to south is 220g. miles, its greatest breadth from east to west, 140g. miles; superficial contents, 29,600 square miles. Heeren's Anc. Hist.]

(^c) The signification of the word Ἑλλάς is sometimes more confined, sometimes more extensive. (1) This name was given to a single city of Phthiotis, built by Hellen, the son of Deucalion. Homer mentions that city, Il. B, 190. (2) The same name was given to a part of Thessaly called Phthia. (3) To all Thessaly. (4) To all Greece; except sometimes Peloponnesus, sometimes Macedonia, sometimes (what we should least expect,) Thessaly, and sometimes Epirus. Hence, Pausan. Att. c. XI, might say: Ῥωμαίοις δὲ οὐδένα Πύρρου πρότερον πολεμήσαντα ἴσμεν Ἑλληνα. (5) It was given to Greece situated on this side of the Ægean sea, taken in all its extent, and without excepting any of the countries which we have just mentioned. (6) Finally, to all the countries inhabited by the Greeks, whether situated in Europe or in Asia.—This is proved by Palmer. Græc. Antiq. I, 3. [(7) In a more limited sense, sometimes to Athens only, and Ἑλληνας to the Athenians. Fischer. ad. Theoph. Char. p. 5.]

(d) Hellen, from whom the word Ἑλληνας is said to be derived, most authors consider to be the son of Deucalion. Marmor. Oxon. n. 10. Thucyd. I, 3. Strabo, VIII.

II. The name of the first Greeks was not Ἑλληνας, but Γραικοί;^e whence they were called by the Romans Græci. This appellation of Greeks, it is true, we find not in Homer; but we meet with it in other old poets and prose-writers. It was taken from Γραῖκος, the son of Thessalus.^f

(e) This denomination of Γραικοί is found Marm. Oxon. n. 10, 11. Aristot. Meteor. I, 14. Lycophr. v. 532, 891, 1195, 1338. The same author calls them, v. 605, Γραικίται. If the reader is curious to know why the Romans preferred the old word, Γραικοί, to the latter one, Ἑλληνας, he may consult Palmer. Græc. Antiq. I, 2. Plin. IV, 7. Hardvin. sect. 40, p. 234.

(f) We know not exactly who Γραῖκος was. Euseb. Chron. I, de Argiv. Reg. n. 35, makes him the father of Thessalus; and Stephens, at the word Γραικός, makes him his son. It is equally doubted whether the Greeks owe their name to that Græcus, their king, or whether they took it from another source. Hiller derives the word from γραῖα, the earth. Hesych. Γραῖα πόλις, γῆ ἢ καὶ Δημήτηρ, giving to Græci the import of γηγενεῖς, sons of the earth. Consult Meurs. ad Lycophr. v. 532: or, ἀπόχθονες: Kircher and Horne derive this word from the name of a patriarch, גַּרְגַּר. Gen. XI, 18: whom St. Luke, III, 35, calls Παγαῦ. Caspar Abel, Hist. Monarch. p. 483, makes it come from γραῖα, an old woman. According to his etymology, it is a name of reproach which the other nations applied to the Greeks. He strengthens this conjecture by the words, Græculus, and Græcari, which the Romans used to express the levity of the Greeks. The same author, however, prefers to this etymology, that which is derived from the Celtic word, Rete, i. e. Gigas, the letter g being prefixed, to soften the pronunciation; as the word Rhati has been changed into that of Grisones. He supports this conjecture by the testimony of Hesychius, who says, that the Greeks were formerly called Παικοί.

III. Attica is a famous country of Greece, bounded on the east by the Ægean sea; on the south by the Saronic gulph; on the west by Megaris, and on the north by Bœotia.^g

(g) Consult, on Attica and its limits, Strabo, IX, init. Plin. IV, 7. [† Its length is 60g. miles, greatest breadth 24g. miles, according to Heeren.]

Strabo is of opinion, that Megaris once made a part of Attica. Pausan. Reimanni Ilias post Homerum, p. 557. For the derivation of Attica, which was likewise called Actæa, Acte, Atthis, consult Stephens in Ἀκτῆ; and Caspar Abel, l. c. p. 606. It is supposed, that Attica, or Atthis, took its name from Atthis, the daughter of Cranaus, by Eustath. ad Dionys. Perieg. p. 322: Strabo, IX, p. 273: [Pausan. Attic. p. 3.] Consult likewise, on the different denominations of Attica, Eustath. ad Dionys. Perieg. p. 222 et sqq. Strab. IX, p. 273.

IV. Attica was anciently called Ἰωνία, (as appears from the inscription of an old statue,^h) not indeed from Ion,ⁱ the son of Xuthus, as the Greeks would have it; but from an older Ion,^j who is the Javan, son of Japhet, of the Hebrews. Hence, Greece, in sacred history, is called Javan.^k

(^h) This inscription is found in Strabo, IX. The same geographer asserts, that Attica was anciently called Ionia. These are his words: ἡ Ἀττικὴ τὸ παλαιὸν Ἰωνία καὶ Ἰὰς ἐκαλεῖτο, Attica was anciently called Ionia and Ias. The same is affirmed by Stephens, at the word Ἰωνία, and by Hesychius, at Ἰωνες. Hence Homer calls the Athenians, not only κοῦροι Ἀθηναίων, and δῆμος Ἐρεχθίδος, but likewise Ἰωνες, Ἰλ. N, 480.

(ⁱ) The Greeks themselves derive the name of Ionia from Ion, the son of Xuthus. Herodot. VII, p. 470: Strab. VII, p. 164; XII, 273. This Ion was, according to others, the son of Apollo and Creusa. Apollodor. I, 7, § 2: Pausan. Attic. I, 29, p. 68.

(^j) The word Ἰωνία may be derived from a more ancient Ion, which corresponds with the Hebrew word Javan, the son of Japheth, Gen. X, 2. The Hebrew word יוֹן, without the points, may perhaps be pronounced Ion. [Evidently so in Josephus, Ant. I, 6: ἀπὸ δὲ Ἰωνάνου Ἰωνία καὶ πάντες Ἕλληνες γεγόνασι.]

(^k) Not only is Greece called יוֹן, Javan: Isai. LXVI, 19: Dan. VIII, 21: X, 20: Ezek. XXVII, 13, 19: but the Jews to this day call the Greek tongue יוֹנִית, Javanit. Besides, in יְשִׁיָּהוּ, the name of Elishah, the son of Javan, which occurs in Gen. X, 4, we have that of Elis, the most ancient kingdom of Peloponnesus. Joseph. Antiq. I, 7. Bochart. in Phaleg. III, 3. Casp. Abel. l. c. p. 486, sqq.

V. There were many cities in Attica,^l of which Athens was the most celebrated. It was situated near Eleusis,^m which was famous for the solemnity in honour of Ceres.ⁿ The circuit of Athens was one hundred and seventy-eight stadia.^o

(^l) Consult, on the cities, mountains, and rivers of Attica, Plin. IV, 7. Strab. IX. Scylax. p. 47.

(^m) Next to Athens, Eleusis, or Eleusin, was the most famous city. The etymology of this word is uncertain. Pausan. Attic. c. 38, and Harpocrat. in Ἐλευσίνα, think the name comes from Eleusinius, the son of Mercury. Others derive it from the Greek verb, ἐλθεῖν, to come, δια τὴν τῆς Δημητέρος ἔλευσιν, on account of the coming of Ceres.

(ⁿ) This solemnity was called Ἐλευσίνα of which we shall speak afterwards, in treating of the Grecian festivals.

(^o) See, on the circuit of Athens, Dion. Chrysost. Or. VI, p. 87. Aristides, Panathen. [p. 149 and 187, ed. Jebb. These stadia must be considered as pertaining to the citadel: for, according to Aristides, it was a day's march to go round the city, the fortifications of which extended even to the sea. Wesseling. ad vetera Rom. Itinera. p. 326. Xenoph. Memorab. Socr. III, 6, 14.]

VI. It was a very beautiful city;^p the asylum of the muses; the parent of arts and sciences:^q hence, the poets have justly styled it, the learned Athens.^r

(p) Consult, on the beauty of Athens, Pausan. Att. and Meursius. The beauty of that city produced these verses of Lysippus in Dicærch:

εἰ μὴ τεθέασαι τὰς Ἀθήνας, στίλεχος εἶ· εἰ δὲ τεθέασαι, μὴ τεθήρευσαι δ' ὄνος· εἰ δ' εὐαρεστών, ἀποτρέχεις, καθήλιος.
 si nunquam Athenas vidisti, stipes es:
 si visa urbe haud captus es, asinus es:
 si captus abis, cantherius es.

(q) Pericles, in Thucyd. II, 41, calls Athens, παίδευσις Ἑλλάδος, the academy of Greece. Diod. Sic. XIII, 27, calls it, κοινὸν παιδευτήριον πάντων ἀνθρώπων, the school of mankind. Eschines, contr. Ctesiph. p. 293, gives it the title of κοινὴ καταφυγὴ τῶν Ἑλλήνων, the common refuge of the Greeks. In Ælian. Var. Hist. IV, 6, the Pythian priestess calls it, the common asylum of Greece, ἡ κοινὴ ἐστία τῆς Ἑλλάδος, because there exiles were most easily admitted. Pind. Nem. Od. IV, 29. Aristoph. Nub. 298. Isocrat. Panegy. Jul. Epist. ad S. P. Q. Atheniensem. Of the Latins, Cicer. pro Flacco, c. 26: de Orat. I, 4. Lucret. lib. VI, v. 1. Stat. Theb. XII, 500. Nepos, Attico, c. 3. Mela, II, 3, 56. Flor. III, 5, § 8. [Besides Isocrates' Panegy. and Panathen. the funeral oration of Pericles may be here cited, Thuc. II, 35—46: the Menexenus of Plato and Aristides' Panathenaica.] Meursii Athenæ Atticæ. Muret. V, lib. IV, I.

(r) Propert. I, 6, 13; III, 20, 1; and Rhemnius Fannius Palæm. de Ponderibus, v. 17, and 39, give Athens the title of learned, doctæ. Martial, VI, 64, v. 17; and Cicero, de Orat. III, 11, give it that of tenuis, acute, or witty. [The city was also famous for the number and magnificence of its public buildings, schools, statues, temples, &c. A few edifices in ruins remain to this day, of which Robert Sayer has published engravings, which have been lately republished at Augsburg.]

VII. The city was not so large and extensive in former as in later times; for that which was, afterwards, only the citadel, at first, constituted the whole city.^s It was called Cecropia, from Cecrops its founder,^t which was afterwards changed for that of Athens in the reign of Amphictyon.^u

(s) Plin. VII, 56. Anonym. περὶ ἀπίστων, c. 1, apud Galeum, p. 85. [Aristid. ll. p. 99, ed. Jebb. But that renowned citadel, built as it was upon an eminence, either, as some think, to provide against inundations; or, what is more probable, that it might be more secure from the enemy, is called from its situation ἀκρόπολις, ἡ ἄνω πόλις, πόλις ἀκρά, the citadel, the upper city.]

(t) Cecrops gave his name to the city, Plin. VII, 56: to the country, Apollodor. III, 13: to the tribe, Stephens in Κεκροπία.

(u) Justin, II, 6. Isidor. Orig. XV, 1. This opinion is combated by Hyginus, fab. 164, who insists that Minerva gave the city her name: and by Plutarch, in Theseo, who attributes that honour to Theseus. Meursius infers from a passage of Marcian, de Fortuna Athen. that the city was named Athens in the reign of Erectheus; an opinion which throws light on a passage of Euripides, Herc. Fur. 1166, where Athens is called Ἐρεχθεϊδῶν πόλις. I know not on what grounds Potter says that it was called Athens in the reign of Erichonius, (Potter's Archæol. 1, 8,) unless he has confounded the name of Erectheus with that of Erichonius. For the other names of Athens, see Strabo, IX, p. 273.

VIII. The learned differ in the etymology of the word Athens.^v Some derive it from the Chaldean thena, to study, or teach; and these are of opinion, that this distinguishing title was not given to the city, until it became famous for literature.

(^v) Some derive this name from the Hebrew תְּנָה or תְּנָה, to learn. Others, with Hiller, from תְּנָה, a city of the Pelasgi, i. e. of strangers, from תְּנָה, to arrive. But Casp. Abel, Hist. Monarch. p. 607, takes it from תְּנָה, robust, strong; and grounds his conjectures on specious reasons. Others derive it from Atthis, daughter of Cranaus. Strabo, IX, p. 273. Pausan. Attic. I, 2. Lastly, according to Plato, it is synonymous with θεουόη, divine mind. Another opinion is to be met with in Lackemach. p. 42.

IX. But it is more probable that it owes its name to Pallas, whom the Greeks call Ἀθήνη, though we must not attribute this denomination to the fabulous dispute betwixt Neptune and Pallas;^w but to Amphictyon's dedication of the city to the patronage of Minerva, Ἀθήνη,^x which is the name of that goddess, and seems to be derived from the Egyptian tongue.^y

(^w) The reader may consult, on this dispute betwixt Minerva and Neptune, Apollodor. III, 13: Ovid. Mct. VI, 70: Serv. ad Virg. I, Georg. 13: and others cited by Meurs. de regno Athen. I, 10: and Burman. ad Ovid. l. c. and de Jove Fulguratore, c. VIII, p. 281.

(^x) That Amphictyon consecrated the city of Athens to Minerva, we have no room to doubt, by reason of the following authorities: Justin, II, 6. Isidor. Orig. XV, 1. On this account the poets call it the city of Pallas, Παλλάδος πόλις, Æschyl. Pers. 347. Virginæ Cecropis arces, Val. Flaccus, V, 647. Armigeræ Tritonidis arces, Petron. c. 5. Notwithstanding these authorities, we cannot assert that Athens took its name from that of Minerva. Nor do we expect those who consider, as C. Abel, l. c. contends, that there were ten cities which formerly went by the name of Athens, to acquiesce in our author's opinion.

(^y) Phurnutus, c. 20, says: τὸ δ' ὄνομα τῆς Ἀθηναίας δυσετυμολόγητον διὰ τὴν ἀρχαιότητα, it is difficult to ascertain the etymology of the word Athens, on account of its antiquity; yet he himself gives some etymologies. Heraclid. Allegor. Homcr. p. 435. Capellus derives the word Athens from the Hebrew תְּנָה, a mistress. Julian Aurel. de cognom. Deorum Gentil. II, 3, cites some etymologies, most of which are false. We meet with a truer one in the ingenious book of M. Pluche, entitled L'Histoire du Ciel, l. I, c. 11, § 14, where he derives the name of Athens from the Hebrew $\eta\eta\eta\eta$ or $\eta\eta\eta\eta$ or $\eta\eta\eta\eta$, Egyptian yarn or linen, Prov. VII, 16, Minerva, 'Αθηνᾶ, being the patroness ὕφαντικῆς, of weaving, and having the epithet ἐργάνη, work-woman, in El. V. II. 1, 2.

X. The Athenians likewise called their city ἄστυ, the city, κατ' ἐξοχήν, by way of eminence: hence, we often find, not only in the Greek, but also in the Latin writers, ἄστυ instead of Athens.^z

(z) Stephens, at the word 'Αλεξάνδρεια, says: ἐλέγετο (Alexandria) κατ' ἐξοχήν πόλις, ὡς ἄστυ καὶ 'Αθηναὶ καὶ ἄστοι καὶ ἄστικοι οἱ 'Αθηναῖοι, ὡς καὶ ἐπὶ 'Ρώμῃς λέγεται οὐρβις, it was eminently called the city, as Athens was called the city, and the Athenians the citizens: and as Rome was likewise called (urbs) the city. Hence, as Homer likewise calls Troy simply the city, πόλις, we find there were four ancient cities, which were eminently called the city; viz. Troy, Athens, Alexandria in Egypt, and Rome.

But when the word ἄστυ was applied to Athens, it comprehended not the Piræus. Nep. IX, 4. The reader may consult Bourdelot, ad Petron. c. 2, on the difference betwixt the words, Attici and Athenienses.

CHAP. II.

THE DEITIES OF GREECE.

I. THE Greeks, without doubt, received their religion partly from the Egyptians,^a partly from the Thracians,^b to whom they were indebted for the name of religion, θρησκεία, and partly from the colonies of different nations which settled amongst them.^c

(^a) Herodot. II, p. 102, 123. Diod. Sic. I, p. 25, 62, 86. Spencer, de Leg. Hebr. ritual. II, diss. I, sect. 2, p. 650.

This conjecture is the more probable, because Cecrops and Danaus, the founders of Athens and Argos, were Egyptians. See, on Cecrops, Schol. Aristoph. ad Pl. 773: Tzetz. ad Lycoph. v. 111: Th. Gale, ad Apollod. III, 13, p. 85: and on Danaus, Apollod. II, 1, 4. Plutarch is of a different opinion from Herodotus on this subject, in l. de malignitate de Herodoti, p. 857.

(^b) Eurip. Rhes. v. 943. Aristoph. Ran. 1064. Plut. Alexand. p. 665. Suidas in θρησκειῶν. Greg. Nazian. Orat. III, p. 100.

(^c) The Pelasgians, Herodot. II, p. 123: and the Phœnicians, Herodot. V, p. 351.

II. The first Greeks, and many other nations, paid divine worship to the sky, sun, moon, stars, and earth.^d And as they saw that continual motion was a property of these bodies, they termed them θεοὶ, from the verb θέειν, to run;^e but θεός may be derived from another root.^f

(^d) Socrates in Plat. Cratyl. Plutar. de Plac. philosoph. I, 6.

(†) It may be derived (1) from the word Ζεὺς, which in the Æolic dialect is Δεὺς, Phurnut. c. 2: (2) from the Hebrew יָד: (3) from δέος, fear: (4) from αἶθειν, to burn: (5) from θεᾶσθαι, to see: (6) from θεωρέω, I view: (7) from τιθημι, I place: (8) from θῶ, i. e. ποιῶ. Suicer, Thesaur. Eccles. in θεός.

III. The very names of their gods are of Egyptian origin,^g to which were added, from time to time, those of other nations.^h Suffice it to mention the principal deities of the Greeks; for to give a detail of them all would be tedious.

(g) Herodot. II, p. 123.

(h) The Dioscuri, for instance, Castor and Pollux, were introduced by the Pelasgians. Neptune was introduced by the Libyans, Herodot. l. c.

The Greeks added to their deities those of the nations with whom they carried on commerce, provided they were approved by the court of Areopagus. This we may conclude from Harpocrat. in Ἐπιθέτους ἑορτάς, from Etymol. M. from Suidas, and particularly, from Justin Martyr, Exhort. ad Gentil. p. 20, C. This custom explains what we read in the Acts of the Apostles, XVII, 19. The same may be inferred from the feast of the θεοξένοι, strange gods, of which Casaubon speaks, ad Athenæum, IX, 3, p. 405. [It was a capital offence to worship gods not duly approved by public authority. Hence it happened that Socrates was condemned for this crime. Servius, ad Virg. Æn. VIII, 185, and Witsii Ægypt. p. 81.]

Finally, that they might not omit the adoration of any deities, they even worshipped the unknown gods. Pausan. Eliac. I, 14. Lucian. Philopat. Act. XVII, 23.

Consult, on the idolomania of the Athenians, Schol. Aristoph. ad Nub. v. 304, who throws considerable light on Acts, XVII, 16, 22.

IV. The classes of their gods corresponded with the different parts of the creation. They had their celestial, their terrestrial, and their infernal deities. Their celestial deities were styled ἐπουράνιοι, Ὀλύμπιοι, ἀθάνατοι, celestial, Olympian, immortal.ⁱ Their gods of the earth ἐπιχθόνιοι, ἥρωες, terrestrial, heroes.^j Their deities of the infernal regions were termed χθόνιοι, ὑποχθόνιοι, καταχθόνιοι, subterranean.^k The first and most solemn worship was devoted to the celestial gods; the second, or inferior worship, to the terrestrial deities; and the third, or lowest, to those of the infernal regions.

(i) They are likewise called by the poets οὐρανίδαι, and οὐρανίωες. Aristoph. Schol. ad Nub. v. 246, makes a distinction betwixt the gods called οὐρανίωες, and those called Ὀλύμπιοι; giving the former title to the old gods under Saturn; and the latter to the later ones under Jupiter. Diodor. Sic. IV, p. 223. Ælian. V. H. V, 12.

(j) They likewise called them ἐπίγειοι; and in this class were comprehended the gods of the sea, θαλάσσιοι.

(*) They likewise gave them the epithets ὑποταρτάριοι, Στύγιοι.

Consult, on this division, the golden verses of Pythagoras, where we also learn to whom of the gods the principal homage was paid. Porphyr. de antro Nymph. p. 233, l. 42: and the preface of Salmasius, ad Tabulam Cebetis. The learned make use of this division to clear up some passages of Scripture: Exod. XX, 4. Phil. II, 10. [The gods called ἐγχώριοι, χθόνιοι, sometimes ἐπιχθόνιοι (in Latin, indigetes, indigenæ,) appear to be heroes deified in a particular place and considered its guardians. Thus it is applied to Æneas, v. c. Dionys. Hal. Arch. I, 64. Liv. I, 2. Heyn. ad Virg. Georg. I, 498.]

V. Of these deities, twelve were the most honoured; they were called μεγάλοι θεοί, the great gods.^m They had the following names:ⁿ

Ποσειδῶν, Neptune.

Ἑστία, Vesta.

(^l) Consult, on this number of the twelve gods, G. d'Arnaud, de diis παρέδροις, c. 6, sq. Philip ranked himself with these gods, Diod. Sic. XVI, whence he had the surname of the thirteenth god, τρισκαιδέκατος θεός, Stob. Serm. 147. Demades was for joining to this class, Alexander the Great, Ælian. V. H. V, 12. It appears, however, that these twelve were the only gods who were styled Ὀλύμπιοι, Kuhn. ad Ælian. V. H. V, 12. Yet Bacchus and Hercules had also this title, according to the authority of Diod. Sic. IV, p. 223.

(^m) I question whether the title μεγάλοι θεοί was given them by any of the Greeks, except an unknown poet, from whom we have the following verses:

δώδεκά εἰσι θεοὶ μεγάλοι, Ζεὺς, Ἥρα, Ποσειδῶν,
Δημήτηρ, Ἐρμῆς, Ἑστία, Κυλλοπόδης,
Φοῖβος, ἐνυάλιος τ' Ἄρης, Παλλάς τ', Ἀφροδίτη,
Ἄρτεμις, εἰσὶ θεοὶ δώδεκα οἱ μεγάλοι.

Kuhn. ad Pausan. Messen. c. 1, p. 281. The Greeks called them simply the twelve gods, οἱ δώδεκα θεοί. Aristoph. Av. 95. Diod. Sic. XVI, p. 482. Apollod. III, 13, § 1. Ælian. V. H. VIII, 12. Pausan. Attic. c. 40, p. 96.

Pindar, Ol. Od. X, calls them, δώδεκα ἄνακτες, the twelve kings. The title of great gods was likewise given to other deities who were not of the number of these twelve. To Castor and Pollux, for example, Paus. Arcad. c. 21. To Proserpine, Paus. Arcad. c. 31. See d'Arnaud, de diis παρέδροις, c. 22. Elsner. ad Act. XIX, 27. Ovid. VI, Met. v. 27, calls them, bis sex caelestes. Plautus alludes to this number of twelve gods, Epidic. V, 1. Sueton. Aug. c. 70.

The Latin authors also often mention the great gods. Virg. Æn. III, 12. Catull. carm. 14. Petron. c. 140.

(ⁿ) We meet with these names of the twelve gods in the Schol. of Apollon. Rhod. I, II, p. 158. They are contained in the two Greek distichs cited above, which we find in Feithius, Antiq. Homer. I, 1, § 4, who attributes them to an old poet. Ennius has translated them into two Latin hexameters, which are to be found in Apul. de Deo Socrat. and Martian. Capell. p. 15.

VI. The Athenians had the greatest veneration for these gods, the figures of whom were painted in the portico of the Ceramicus.^o They had likewise erected to their honour an altar, which they called βωμὸς τῶν δώδεκα θεῶν, the altar of the twelve gods.^p (^o) Pausan. Attic. c. 3. The same author informs us, c. 40, that there was a temple at Megara, in which were the statues of the twelve gods.

(^p) Thucyd. VI, 54.

VII. They gave them different epithets in consequence of the different functions which they assigned them.^q To understand the Greek authors, especially the poets, we should be acquainted with these epithets.

(e) Βασιλεὺς, Aristoph. Nub. I. Xenoph. 'Αναβ. VI, 1. The reason why Jupiter is so called is to be found in the Schol. of Aristoph. l. c. and in Dion. Chrys. Orat. I. In the same sense, he is called ἀναξ, sovereign. Sometimes he is called ἀναξ βασιλεὺς, the sovereign king. And sometimes, ἀναξ ἀνάκτων, king of kings. Spanhem. ad Callim. h. in Jov. v. 2: and Ζεὺς τύραννος. Aristoph. Nub. 564.

(f) Σκηπτούχος, the sceptre-bearer. Beger. Thesaur. Brandenburg. T. I, p. 80. [To these may be added other surnames of Jupiter, as ἐλευθέριος, the protector of liberty. Under this title he was worshipped by the Athenians after their victory at Marathon, according to Aristides, T. Four arts are ascribed to Apollo, music, archery, medicine, divination.

(i) Ἀποτρόπαιος, who keeps us from dangers, ἀποσοβητής τῶν κακῶν, Aristoph. Plut. 359. This epithet has likewise been applied to other gods, Pausan. Corinth. c. XI.

(j) Ἀλεξίκακος, evil-averting, Macrob. Saturn. I, 17. [Also Meurs. Ceramic. Gem. c. 4.]

(k) Ἀγυιεύς, ἀγυιάτης, who presides over roads, Aristoph. Vesp. 870. Horat. IV, Od. VI, v. 28. Macrob. Sat. I, 9, gives a reason for this denomination.

(l) Λοξίας, oblique, meandrous, Aristoph. Plut. 8, where the Scholiast assigns two reasons for this epithet. A third may be found in the Scholiast of Callimachus, in Dian. v. 204. Tzetz. ad Lycophr. v. 1467, interprets it by λοξοχρήσμων, giving ambiguous responses. Phurnut. c. 32. Macrob. Sat. I, 17.

(m) Πύθιος, Pythian, and Delphian, being, perhaps, of the same import. For Pytho and Delphi were names of the same city. Pausan. Phocic. 6. Aristoph. Vesp. 865. Phurnut. c. 32. Macrob. Sat. I, 17.

(n) Παιάν and παιών, healing, Æschyl. Agamemn. 153. Aristoph. Vesp. 496. We find the reason for this title in Callimachus, h. in Apoll. v. 97. Macrob. l. c. He has the same epithets in the Latin writers, Cic. Ferr. IV, 57. Gravius, Cyneg. 426.

(o) Εὐλύρας, the masterly player on the harp, Aristoph. Θεσμοφ. 978.

(p) Ἐκατηβόλος, ἐκηβόλος, ἐκάεργος, ἐκατηβελέτης, who throws his darts far, i. e. his rays. Hom. Ἰλ. A, 370, 474: ἑκατος, v. 385. Phurnut. c. 32. Heraclid. Alleg. Hom. p. 417. Macrob. I, 17.

(q) Τοξοφόρος, or τοξίας, in Hesychius, the bow-bearer: τόξ' ὤμοισιν ἔχων, Hom. Ἰλ. A, 45: τόξα, βέλη, κήλα, are the rays of the sun. This epithet differs not from the preceding. Ἡ τοξοφόρος is the same with Diana in Aristoph. Θεσμοφ. 979. [Schütz. ad Æsch. Sept. adv. Theb. 147, explains the origin of Apollo λυκείος or λύκαιος, the destroyer of wolves. X. Neptune had the names of ἀλυκός,^r ἀλιμέδων,^s πόντιος,^t ἵππιος.^u

(r) Ἀλυκός, i. e. θαλάσσιος, ἐνάλιος, marine, Aristoph. Lysist. 404. He is likewise styled πελαγαῖος, Pausan. Achaic. XXI.

(s) Ἀλιμέδων, ruling the sea, Aristoph. Θεσμοφ. v. 330.

(u) Ἴππιος, equestrian, Aristoph. Nub. 83. He was also called ἵππιος, Eurip. Phociss. 1701. Ἴππηγέτης, Lycophr. 767. See, for the causes of this title, Barnes, ad Euripid. Rhés. 187. Spanhem. ad Aristoph. Nub. 83. Pausan. Achaic. 21. [Eudocia, in Ion, p. 343, thinks that, perhaps, he was so called ἀπὸ τοῦ ταχέϊαν τὴν διὰ θαλάσσης ὁδὸν εἶναι, καθάπερ ἵπποις ἡμῶν ταῖς ναυσὶ χρωμένων. He is also surnamed γαιήοχος and θεμελιοῦχος, because, as the same author writes, l. l. ὡσανεὶ ἐπ' αὐτῷ κειμένου τοῦ ἀσφαλῶς ἐστάναι τὰ οἰκήματα ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς. Eudocia, l. l. says, that on account of the extent of the sea, he is called εὐρύστερνος, εὐρυμέδων and εὐρυβόης.]

XI. Mars, those of βαθυπόλεμος,^v χάλκεος,^w &c.

(v) Βαθυπόλεμος, exceeding warlike, Pindar. Pyth. Od. II, v. 2.

(w) Χάλκεος, brazen. He was likewise called χαλκοχίτων, wearing a brazen coat of mail. [He is also called μαιφόνος and βροτολοιγός, from soldiers slaughtering each other: and ἀλαλάξιος from their shouting as they join battle.]

XII. Mercury, ἐναγώνιος,^x στροφαῖος,^y ἐμπολαῖος,^z ἐριούριος,^a ὄλιος,^b ἡγεμόνιος.^c

(x) Ἐναγώνιος, the president of combats, Aristoph. Plut. 1162, and Spanhem.

(y) Στροφαῖος, the guardian of doors, Aristoph. Plut. 1154; from στροφεύς, the hinge of a door.

(z) Ἐμπολαῖος, encouraging trade. He is also styled ἐμποριῶν ἐπιστάτης, the god who presides over commerce. Aristoph. Plut. 1156. Phurn. c. 16. [From the same prerogative he is surnamed κερδῶος, god of gain: also ἀγοραῖος, because he is, to use the words of Eudocia, ἐπίσκοπος τῶν ἀγοραζόντων τι ἢ πιπρασκόντων, the guardian of those who buy and sell: thus it was on the brazen statue of Mercury in the market-place at Athens. Junius, de Pict. vet. p. 92.]

(a) Ἐριούμιος, of great service to mortals. Hom. Ἴλ. Ω, 360. Aristoph. Ran. 1175. Μεγαλοφελής, ἀπό τοῦ ὄνειν. Phurnut. c. 16.

(b) Δόλιος, artful. Aristoph. Plut. 1158. Callidus quidquid placuit jocosu condere furto. Hor. I, Od. 12.

(c) Ἠγεμόνιος, ὁδηγός, ἐνόςδιος, a guide. Aristoph. Plut. 1160. [He is also styled ἀργειφόντης, the slayer of Argus: Κυλλήνιος, from Cyllene, a mountain in Arcadia: νόμιος, the keeper of cattle: δῆκτωρ, either, the messenger of the gods, or, the conductor of the souls of the dead to the regions of bliss: τρικέφαλος, from his statues where three ways meet.]

XIII. Vulcan, κλυτοτέχνης,^d κλυτόεργος,^e πανδαμάτωρ.^f

(d) Κλυτοτέχνης, the great artist, Homer. Ἴλ. A, 571.

(e) Κλυτόεργος, the famous artificer, Hom. Ἴλ. Θ, 345.

(f) Πανδαμάτωρ, the all-subduer. In Lucian, this epithet is given to thunder; in Homer, Ἴλ. Ω, 5, to sleep.

In Musæus, v. 200, to love: in the Anthol. l. VII, ep. 29, to gold: IV, 8, to Hercules: IV, p. 472, to death.

XIV. Juno, τελεία,^g &c.

(g) Τελεία, who presides over marriages, to whom τέλειοι γάμοι were a particular care. Aristoph. Θεσμof. 882. She had likewise the epithet γαμήλιος, which is of the same import. Spanhem. ad Callim. h. in Jov. v. 57. Diod. Sic. V, p. 340.

(h) Ἐργάνη, inventress of arts. Ælian. V. H. I, 2. Diod. I, 5, p. 340, says she was so called, διὰ τὸ εὐρεῖν πολλὰ τῶν φιλοτέχνων ἔργων, because to her we owe many inventions which exercise the skill of the ingenious.

(i) Εὐρεσίτεχνος, inventress of arts. Orph. h. XXXI, v. 17.

(j) Πολύβουλος, fertile in counsel. Hom. Ἴλ. E, 260.

(k) Πολύμητις, full of wisdom and prudence. Hom. h. in Pallad. v. 2.

(l) Δαίφρων, wise or warlike. See, on this double signification, Scherpezeel. ad Hom. Ἴλ. B, 23. Homer gives this title to other deities.

(m) Τριτογένεια. [†So called because she had a temple near the lake Tritonis, in Africa (which is the common account): or from τριτώ, the head, and γείνομαι, to be born, as being born from the head of Jupiter; or because τὸ τρεῖν ἐγγενῆ τοῖς ἐχθροῖς, she struck terror into her enemies. (x) Κυνηγέτις, κυνηγός, from following the hounds. Aristoph. Lys. v. 1271.

(y) Θηρήτειρα, from killing wild beasts. [From this pursuit she is also called θηροκτόνος, ἐλαφηβόλος, and ὀρεσίφοιτος: but she is supposed to be styled ἐκάτη τρίμορφος, on account of the triple form of the moon, or because she was adored where three ways met; and from hence, also, called τριοδίτις, as being τῶν τριόδων ἐπόπτις.]

(z) Ἰοχέαιρα, delighting in archery. Homer. h. in Apoll. v. 15. Hesiod. Θ. 14.

(b) Κουροτρόφος, the nurse of boys. Hesych. θητηῶν θρέπτειρα προπάντων, the nourisher of all mortals. Orph. in h. 39, 7. She was the same as the earth. Hence Aristoph. Θ. 307, and Paus. Att. 22, give this epithet to the earth. There were yet other divinities who were appointed κουροτρόφοι by Jupiter to give sustenance to mortals. Cleric. ad Hes. Θ. v. 450.

XIX. Vesta, πατρώα, the tutelary goddess of the country, i. e. of Greece. See Sophocles's Electra, 887.

XX. Besides these divinities, there were the δαίμονες, demons, who were supposed to be of a later existence.^h Several men too, illustrious for their exploits, or their virtue, were ranked with the gods; and these they termed ἥρωες, heroes.ⁱ

(h) The δαίμονες signify intermediate beings betwixt the divine and human nature. Plut. de Orac. Def. p. 415. Jamblich. de Myst. c. V, p. 8. Such were Pluto, Pan, the Satyrs. [Consult Jacob. de Rhæar. Fer. Daventr. p. 112.]

(i) The heroes were called ἡμίθεοι, demi-gods. Some of them owed their birth to gods; others were the sons of mere mortals, whom their virtues had raised to the rank of the gods, and whose worship and honours they shared. The definition of the word hero is to be found in Lucian. Dialog. Mort. III, p. 267, Ed. Græv.

Such were Bacchus, Hercules, Castor and Pollux, Æsculapius, Achilles, Menelaus, Helen. Cleomedes of Astypalæa, is said to have been the last of these heroes. Pausan. Eliac. post. c. IX. See Lloydius.

XXI. The demons were looked upon as ministers of the gods in the government of human affairs;^j as interpreters and mediators for mankind with the supreme being.^k

(k) Plato, in Sympos. p. 327. Max. Tyr. diss. 26, 27.

XXII. The Athenians likewise adopted foreign deities,^l and raised altars to them.^m But their worship was not permitted without a public decree.ⁿ It could not be introduced by individuals.^o

(l) The foreign deities were called θεοὶ ξενικοί, in opposition to the πατρώοι, those of their own country. That the Athenians worshipped such gods, see in Hesychius θεοὶ ξενικοί. The Eleans had these deities, Pausan. Eliac. prior. c. 15.

(m) Hieronym. Comment. ad Tit. 1.

(n) The public worship of the new deities was not permitted without the approbation of the court of the Areopagus. Isocrates, in Areopagiticò, p. 188, Ed. Basil. 1558. Just. Mart. in παραινέσει πρὸς Ἕλληνας, p. 20. Harpocr. in ἐπιθέτους ἑορτάς.

(o) For this reason the Athenians would not allow St. Paul this innovation. Acts, XVII, 18.

They even adored unknown gods,^p and erected altars to them, which they called βωμοὶ ἀνόνημοι, the anonymous altars.^q

(^p) The passage of Pausanias, Eliac. I, c. 14, which is commonly cited, proves nothing; because he here refers to the unknown gods of Olympia. See Philostrat. in vit. Apollon. VI, 3. [Pausanias, Attic. p. 1, mentions the altars of unknown gods, heroes, &c.] Wolf. in Curis Philol. ad Act. XVII, 23.

CHAP. III.

SACRED PLACES.

I. ADORATION was paid to these deities in places consecrated to their worship. Of such places, there were three kinds. The first were called τεμένη, fields set apart;^a though this word has sometimes a more extensive signification.^b The second, ἄλση, sacred groves.^c The third, ναοὶ, or ἱερά, temples, or sacred buildings.^d

(^a) This word is derived from τέμνειν, to divide, to separate. Pausanias, Eliac. II, c. 6.

(^b) Τεμένη are, properly, places set apart [in the open air, as in Xenoph. Cyrop. VII, 5, 35; VIII, 3, 1. Hesych. h. v.] from profane uses, and consecrated to the gods. And as the same definition may be applied to the sacred groves and the temples, so we find τέμενος sometimes used for either. Perizon. ad Ælian. VI, 1.

(^c) On the sacred woods, Spanhem. ad Callim. h. in Dian. v. 38. Eschenbach. diss. Acad. III, de Gentilium consecratis Lucis, p. 133. Feith. Antiq. Hom. I, 3, § 2.

(^d) Ἱερά, sc. οικήματα, sacred edifices. Ναοὶ, from ναίειν, to inhabit, as if the gods made them their habitations. Thus Homer, h. in Mercur. v. 251, calls them θεῶν ἱεροὶ δόμοι, the sacred houses of the gods.

II. The Greeks seem to have taken from the Egyptians the custom of erecting temples.^e

(^e) Herodot. II, p. 102. [Spencer, de Legg. Hebr. ritual. p. 1190, mentions the error of those who refer the origin of temples to Deucalion; and p. 1198, relates the true causes, why the ancients, in the first instance, built temples in honour of heroes.]

III. They were built either in the most elevated part of their cities;^f or without the cities, on mountains;^g the gate facing the east.^h

(^f) Homer. Ἰλ. X, 170. Vitruv. I, 7. Hence, going to the temple was expressed by ἀναβαίνειν, ἀνέρχεσθαι, to ascend. Ælian. V. H. III, 37.

IV. The innermost and most sacred recess of the temple was called ἄδυτον, the sanctuary.ⁱ

(ⁱ) The reader will find a description of it in Polluc. Onomart. I, 1, 8. Jul. Cæs. de B. C. III, 105. He calls the adyta, the secret and interior part of the temple, which the priests alone had a right to enter—occulta et recondita templi; quò, præter sacerdotes adire fas non est. [Rambach. ad Potter. Archæol. T. I, p. 462, after Lakemach. Antiq. gr. sac. p. 174, thus divides a temple, (1) προπύλαια, the external portico: (2) πρόναον, the porch at the entrance under the same roof with the temple itself, where commonly stood the altar: (3) ναὸς, the temple itself, of which the parts were, first πρόδομος, σηκός, or τέμενος, where the sacred image of the god was close railed in; behind was the ὀπισθόδομος, or ἄδυτον.

V. There were temples dedicated solely to the worship of one divinity;^j there were others consecrated to that of many.^k The deities who had one common temple, were styled σύνναοι,^l and σύμβωμοι.^m

(^j) Of the former kind was the brazen temple of Minerva, of which Pausanias speaks, Lacon. 17. That of the Delphian and Pythian Apollo, Attic. 19.

(^k) Of the latter kind was the temple of Vulcan and Minerva at Athens. Paus. Attic. c. 14. Augustin. de C. D. XVIII, 12. The pantheon, τὸ κοινὸν τῶν πάντων θεῶν ἱερόν, the common temple of all the gods. Paus. Attic. c. v.

(^l) Strab. VII, p. 227. Plut. Sympos. IV, 4. They were called in Latin, contubernales. Cicer. ad Attic. XIII, 28.

(^m) Strab. XI, p. 352. D'Arnaud, de Diis παρέδροις, c. X, and XI, who says that they were also called ὀμοβῶμοι, παρέδροι, σύννοικοι, ὀμόναιοι, ὀμοτοιχοι, συνέστιοι ἱερῶν.

VI. The temples took their names from the deities in honour of whom they were erected. The temple of Diana was called Ἀρτεμίσιον;ⁿ that of Juno, Ἡραῖον;^o that of Neptune, Ποσειδώνιον;^p that of Ceres, Θεσμοφόριον;^q that of Castor and Pollux, Ἀνακτόρειον.^r The most famous of these temples was that of Diana at Ephesus.^s

(ⁿ) This word, properly, was made use of to express the statue of Diana. Harpocrat. in Ἀρτεμις. The temple was called ὁ νεὸς τῆς Ἐφεσῖας Ἀρτεμῖδος, the temple of Ephesian Diana; and ἱερόν Ἀρτεμῖδος, the temple of Diana. Spanhem. ad Callim. h. in Dian. v. 35. Ad Act. XIX, 35.

(^q) Aristoph. Θεσμ. v. 285.

(^r) Lucian. in Tim. p. 79, calls it, ἀνάκειον; for Castor and Pollux were called ἀνακες. The reason for this name is to be found in Kuhn. ad Pausan. Phocic. c. 38. Vossius, de Or. et Progr. Idol. I, 13, calls all sorts of temples, ἀνάκτορα. Ælian. V. H. XIII, 27.

(^s) Pausan. Messen. c. 31. Interpr. ad Act. XIX, 27. Liv. I, 45. Plin. XVI, 40. Solin. 43. Philo Byzant. de Septem orbis Miraculis, Mirac. VI, makes this temple of Diana one of the seven wonders. So does the anonymous writer, περὶ ἀπίστων, c. 2, in opusc. Galei, p. 85.

VII. The temples were adorned with statues, and offerings.

VIII. The statues were images, or representations of the gods;† and divine worship was paid them.^u They were called by the general term, ἀγάλματα.^v

(†) They were termed εἰκόσματα θεῶν. Pollux. I, 1, 7.

(u) Pausan. Bœot. c. 39, p. 790, 791. Lactantius exclaims against this worship of images, II, 2, 2.

(v) Ἀγάλματα, then, signifies resemblances, pictures, statues; as the lexicons explain the word.

IX. This custom of erecting statues to the gods, the Greeks took from the Egyptians.^w

(w) This is proved by the testimony of Herodot. II, p. 102, who says, the Egyptians were the first nation that exhibited the gods in their temples. It is also probable from this circumstance, that Cœcrops, who was an Egyptian, was the first that brought this custom into Attica. Euseb. Præp. Ec. X, 9.

X. Amongst the ancient Greeks these substitutes for their divinities were not formed by the elegant artist.^x They were shapeless stones,^y pieces of wood, posts, logs, and rude pillars.^z

(x) Clem. Alex. in Protrept. calls these images, ξύλον οὐκ εἰργασμένον, unwrought wood; afterwards, σανίς, a plank. Arnobius calls them, signa inertia, I, p. 13.

(y) Pausan. Achaic. c. XXII, p. 579. Dio. Chrys. Or. II, calls them, ἄσημοι λίθοι, unshapen stones. When these stones were anointed with oil, they were called βαπτύλια. Eschenbach. de Unctionibus Gentilium, p. 389. A passage of Genesis, XXVIII, 18, 19, seems to have given rise to this denomination.

(z) Clem. Alex. Strom. I, p. 348. Euseb. Præp. Ev. I, 9, p. 29. Paus. VIII, 17.

Pausanias calls them, logs; but Eusebius and Clemens, columns.

XI. But in time these representations were more ingeniously wrought. They were made ἀνθρωπόμορφα, in human shape;^a and these they called βρέτη.^b At first, their feet touched each other;^c afterwards, they were separated.^d They were in different attitudes: some were standing; others lying; and others were seated.^e

(a) Herodot. I, p. 62. Justin Martyr, Apoll. II, reproaches the Greeks with this absurdity; and it is proved by a great number of ancient statues of gods and goddesses which remain to this day.

(b) They were called βρέτη; according to the grammarians, παρὰ τὸ βροτῶ εἰκέναι, from the remembrance they bore to a man. Aristoph. Schol. ad

(e) Pausan. Corinth. p. 134, mentions a statue of Pan seated, and one of Diana standing. And Gronov. ad Melamp. III, 1, speaks of a statue of Jupiter sitting, and of one of Ocean lying. Pausan. Achaic. XXI, p. 577. In Euseb. Præp. Ev. III, 7, p. 98, there is an elegant quotation from Porphyry, on the different attitudes of the gods, standing and seated. Plin. III, ep. 6. XV. Clothes were put upon some of them:^o others were adorned before a mirror.^p

(^u) The Latins call them, tensæ. Festus. Liv. V, 41. Paus. Eliac. prior. IX, p. 396.

XX. The temples of the gods were also adorned with offerings,^v which were hung up^w for ornaments,^x and consecrated to them.^y They were called ἀναθήματα, hangings.^z

(^v) Pausanias, Phocic. gives a detail of the offerings in the temple at Delphi, c. IX.

(^w) Homer. Ὀδ. I, 274. They were hung upon the pillars, walls, arches, &c. See Kunz. sacra et profana ἀναθήματων historia, § 14, p. 14.

To make these offerings is ἀνατιθέναι, Aristoph. Plut. 845: and ἐξαρτᾶν, Long. Pastoral. p. 27.

(^x) Hence, Hesychius makes synonymous the words ἀνάθημα and κόσμημα, offering and ornament. Luke, XXI, 5. Herodian. I, 14. Suicer. The-saur. Eccles. T. I, p. 268, sq.

(^y) The emperor Justinian, Inst. § 8, de rerum divis. thus defines offerings, ea quæ ad dei ministeria dedicata sunt, things consecrated to the ministry of the gods.

(^z) From the verb ἀνατιθέναι, to hang up, or set apart. They were likewise called δῶρα, ἀφιερῶματα ἀνακείμενα, gifts, sacred things, things set apart, according to Macrobius: χαριστήρια, Phalarid. ep. 84: Justin. XXIV, 6, § 8, calls them, munera: Kypke, ad Luc. XXI, 9, p. 316, derives ἀναθήματα from ἀνατιθέναι, in the sense of to lay upon: and in this sense explains the proverb, ταῦτα ἐν θεῶν γούνασι κείται.

XXI. These offerings were made either from motives of piety or gratitude,^a after a deliverance from some evil,^b or after gaining a victory.^c

CHAP. IV.

SACRED PERSONS.

I. THE sacred persons were men intrusted with the care of the holy places, of the woods, the temples, and the religious ceremonies. The general appellation of the priests was ιερεῖς:^a they were held in great veneration.^b

(a) Plato gives us a description of them, in Polit. or in dialog. de Regno. They were likewise styled ιερουργοί, θεουργοί, θῦται; by the poets, θυηπόλοι, θυτήρες, ιερομνήμονες, ἀρητήρες; and, in general, ὑπηρέται θεοῦ, ministers of god. Saubert. de Sacrif. c. 6. [Plato, l. l. c. 29, makes the duty of the priests to consist in two things; first, in duly offering up the gifts brought to them; next, in praying for the welfare of those sacrificing.]

(b) On account of the communication which was supposed to subsist between them and the gods. Plut. Quæst. Rom. p. 291. Pausan. Ach. XX, p. 573; XXVII, p. 595, hence, they were chosen from the first families. Their persons were considered sacred and inviolable, Pausan. Messen. IX, p. 301. [In former times, the priesthood was wholly united with royalty, as amongst the Lacedæmonians, Xenoph. Rep. Lac. c. 15: the inhabitants of Delos, Virg. Æn. III, 80: the Egyptians, Plat. l. l. c. 30: the same author says, that the chief magistrates amongst the Greeks discharged that holy office.]

II. There were different classes of them in the great cities.^c He who was at the head of the whole order, and whose province it was to celebrate the most sacred mysteries, was called ἀρχιερεὺς, the chief priest.^d The priests had their ministers, whose names corresponded with their different functions.^e

(c) Aristot. VI, Politic. c. 8.

(d) Joseph. Antiq. Jud. XIV, 8.

(e) For example; ἱεροποιοί, they who assisted at the sacrifices; παράσιτοι, they who collected the sacred corn, Pollux. VI, 7, 35. Ταμίαι τῶν ἱερῶν χρημάτων, the stewards of the sacred fund, Aristot. Polit. VI, 8. Ναοφύλακες, the keepers of the temples, id. [Here, also, may be mentioned, first, κήρυκες, the criers, who, at the beginning of the rites, commanded the people, εὐφημεῖν, bene precari, lingua favere, and dismissed them when they were concluded; and, next, οἱ νεωκόροι, or ναοφύλακες, who cleaned and adorned the temple, and kept the sacred utensils.]

III. Amongst the Greeks, the women, as well as the men, were admitted to sacred functions. The priestesses were called ἱέρειαι.^f They were commonly virgins;^g and in Athens they were daughters of the first families.^h

(f) They were also called ἀρήτειραι. They were not only employed in the worship of the goddesses, but of the gods likewise; of Apollo, Hercules, and Bacchus, for instance. Pausan. Bæot. XXVII, p. 673; Lacon. XX, 261. Schol. Aristoph. Plut. v. 9. Pausan. Corinth. XXXIII, p. 189, of Neptune. The priestesses of Bacchus were called Βάκχαι, Θυάδες, Μιμαλλόνες, (Lycophr.) Μαινάδες. The priestess of Apollo was termed Πυθιάς, Προφήτις, Φοιβάς.

(g) There was a law at Athens, which obliged the priestesses to be virgins. Spanhem. h. in Apoll. v. 110, p. 116; h. in Pallad. v. 34, p. 566.

(h) Spanhem. ad Callim. h. in Cer. v. 43, p. 691.

IV. Thus the priestesses of Minerva,ⁱ of Ceres,^j of Cybele,^k and of Venus,^l were virgins. Those of Ceres were distinguished by the name of μέλισσαι.^m This title was likewise given to other priestesses.ⁿ

(k) The priestesses of Rhea, or Cybele, were called κερμοφόροι, Nicandr. Alex. p. 144. Spanhem. ad Callim. h. in Apoll. p. 116. Pausan. Arcad. XXXVI, p. 673, concerning the priestesses of Rhea.

VIII. At Athens, the priests and priestesses were drawn by lot,^s from the men and virgins of the most distinguished families,^t and were required to be of an irreproachable life.^u This manner of appointing them was called κληροῦσθαι.^v

From both of which we must likewise distinguish those who succeeded to the priesthood by birthright, οἱ ἐκ γένους.

Thus amongst the Athenians, the Εὐμολπίδαι,^b the Κήρυκες,^c the Εὐπατρίδαι,^d and the Ἐτεοβουτάδαι,^e were of this class: amongst the Argians, the Ἀκαστορίδαι.^f Thus, some priesthoods were family titles.

CHAP. V.

DIVINE WORSHIP, PRAYERS, &c.

I. THERE were three religious duties which they performed in the sacred places; viz. prayers, sacrifices, and lustrations.

II. The object of the prayers, in Greek, εὐχαι, προσευχαι, δεήσεις,^a was the obtaining of some good, or the averting of some evil.^b

(a) They were also called εὔγματα, ἱκεσίαι, ἱκετεῖαι, πρόσοδοι, αἰτήματα, λιταί, &c.

(b) Plato, Alcib. quotes two verses of an old Greek poet, in which these two objects are comprehended:

Ζεῦ βασιλεῦ, τὰ μὲν ἔσθλα, καὶ εὐχομένοις καὶ ἀνεύκτοις, ἄμμι δίδου, τὰ δὲ δεινὰ καὶ εὐχομένοις ἀπάλεξε.

Sovereign Jove, grant unto us, both asking and not asking, good things; but withhold from us evil, although we, through ignorance, pray for them.

III. As to the ceremonies used in prayer:

1. They raised the hand to the mouth,^c and then extended it towards the deity whom they were worshipping.^d To use this ceremony was termed, in Greek, προσκυνεῖν;^e and in Latin, adorare.^f

2. They turned themselves round,^g and looked towards the east.^h

(g) Plut. Camill. p. 131, F, informs us that this was likewise a Roman custom, and that it was introduced by Numa Pompilius, in Numa, p. 69, E. Plin. XXVIII, 2. The same author, and Athenæus ex Posid. IV, 13, p. 152, says that the Gauls had the same practice. We find traces of this custom in Plautus, Curcul. I, 1, v. 70. Suet. Vitell. c. 2, says that this custom of turning to the right to pray, was more strictly observed by the Romans than by the Greeks.

Vestiges of the same usage are likewise found in Aristophanes, Pac. 957. Trygæus says to his slave:

ἄγε δὴ τὸ κανοῦν λαβὼν σὺ καὶ τὴν χέριμβά, περῖθι τὸν βωμὸν ταχέως ἐπὶ δεξιά.

Come, then, take the bason and water, and wheel round the altar quickly to the right.

SACRIFICES.

I. SACRIFICES are termed, in Greek, θυσίαι, and δῶρα.^a And to sacrifice, is θύειν, προσφέρειν,^b or ἀναφέρειν θυσίας,^c ποιεῖν.^d The poets use ρέζειν, ἔρχειν.^e

(a) Eurip. Medea, v. 964. In Latin, dona, munera. Broukhus. ad Tibull. IV, 1, v. 8. Yet Plato, de Fotis, distinguishes δῶρα from θυσίαι.

II. θύειν, with the ancient Greeks, signified to burn perfumes;^f and θύος, incense, burned in honour of the gods.^g From this word is derived the Latin thus.^h For, in early ages, the blood of animals was not shed to propitiate the gods: odours and perfumes only were used in sacrifices.ⁱ

III. The first Athenians, following the injunction of Triptolemus, θεοῖς καρποῖς ἀγάλλειν, to regale the gods with fruits, offered them only the produce of the earth.^j They deemed it but just, to give the gods the first fruits of those good things which they so liberally bestowed on mankind; and these, in early times, were fruits.^k

VIII. Sometimes they sacrificed many animals at once. Thus, at Athens, there was a sacrifice which consisted of three animals of different species; the hog, the he-goat, and the ram: it was, for that reason, called τριπτύς.^t Sometimes a hundred victims were offered at once. This was a solemn sacrifice, and was called ἐκατόμβη, a hecatomb.^u

IX. The several animals which we have mentioned were not offered, indiscriminately, to all the gods. The different deities had their proper victims.^v An ox, five years old, was sacrificed to Jupiter;^w a black bull, a hog, and a ram, to Neptune;^x a heifer, and an ewe, to Minerva;^y a black and barren ewe, to the infernal deities;^z a she-goat, and a cock, to Æsculapius,^a &c.

Potter, ad Lycoph. v. 77, gives the following reasons why certain species of animals were offered to the gods in preference to others. (1) They often sacrificed animals to their deities, which were odious to them, hoping that hostile blood would appease them. (2) They likewise thought they would be propitiated by offering them such fruits of the earth, or such animals as were agreeable to them. Thus to Ceres they offered the firstlings of grain; those of the vintage to Bacchus; and a dove to Venus.

The sacrifices were either public or private. Xenoph. Memorab. I, 1, § 2.

[Cakes were sometimes offered in lieu of victims; at first, in the form of an ox, either by the poor, or from a scarcity of animals, or, perchance, according to the institutions of the country. Thus Thucydides, I, 126, relates that θύματα ἐπιχώρια were offered at the Diasia, (a festival in honour of Jupiter Milichius, the Propitious,) which the Scholiast interprets πέμματα εἰς μορφὰς ζώων τετυπωμένα, cakes moulded into the shape of animals. Pollux, VI, 76.]

CEREMONIES USED IN SACRIFICING.

I. THE following were the sacrificial ceremonies. The victim was adorned στέμμασι, with wreaths or garlands.^a Sometimes its horns were gilded.^b

The ἐπουράνιοι, celestial gods, alone were honoured with these.^w To the ἐπιχθόνιοι, terrestrial deities, lower altars were erected, called ἐσχάραι.^x But for the ὑποχθόνιοι, infernal gods, they only dug a ditch, and poured into it the blood of the immolated victim.^y

And Athenæus relates, V, c. 4, that in his time there was a law, that they should leave certain sacred rites before sunset.]

PURIFICATIONS.

I. BESIDES the sacrifices, the Greeks likewise used purifications. What the Latins called lustrare, the Greeks expressed by the words, καθαίρειν,^a ἀγνίζειν :^b whence are derived καθαρμοί, and ἀγνισμοί, lustrations, or purifications.^c

II. Purifications were practised either before they entered upon religious duties, or after acts by which they thought themselves polluted.

III. They used purifications before they entered upon a religious duty. For instance, before they went to the temples ;^d before the sacrifices ;^e before they were initiated into sacred mysteries ;^f before their solemn vows and prayers.^g These were the most solemn purifications.

ORACLES AND DIVINATIONS.

I. ORACLES and divinations may likewise be considered a part of their religion. The answers which the gods gave when they were consulted in doubtful and difficult cases, were the oracles. These were termed χρησμοί, ἀπὸ τοῦ χρᾶν. (For the god himself was said χρᾶν, to make a response.)^a They were also called λόγια,^b μαντεύματα,^c θεοπρόπια, &c.^d The places where these oracles were announced, were called χρηστήρια,^e μαντεῖα;^f the diviners, χρησμολόγοι;^g and to consult them, was expressed by the word χρᾶσθαι.^h

II. The oracles had gained such credit and veneration, that they were consulted in all important affairs, and on all doubtful events.ⁱ Their answers were deemed the advice of heaven, and received with implicit faith.^j In short, if a form of government was to be changed,^k if laws were to be made,^l if war was to be declared,^m or peace concluded, they entered upon none of these important matters without first consulting the oracles.

III. The veneration for the oracles was augmented by the gifts and sacrifices which they who consulted them, were obliged to offer. Princes and rich men, therefore, could alone consult them;ⁿ and that only upon certain days.^o

(^o) Plut. Quæst. Gr. p. 292.

IV. Some have thought that these responses were dictated by demons; and others, that they might be justly attributed to imposture and priestcraft.

But incredible as it may appear, that the whole should be the invention of man, yet we know for certain that fraud and artifice were practised in them to a considerable extent.^p

(^p) Some of the ancients attributed these answers to the gods themselves, Jamblich. de Myst. Sect. III, c. XI, p. 72. Others, to good or evil genii, Plut. de Orac. def. p. 418. Others, to exhalations of the earth, and similar physical causes, Cic. de Div. I, c. 50. Plin. II, 93. And others, to human souls separated from their bodies. Plut. l. c. p. 431.

Some of the Fathers were of opinion that it was the devil himself who spoke, Tertull. de præscript. adv. hæret. p. 122, ed. Bas. 1539. Minuc. Fel. c. 26. Lactant. II, 14.

Many moderns have written in defence of this opinion; and, among them, P. Baltus, Reponse a l'histoire des Oracles, &c. G. Mæbius, de Oraculorum Ethnicorum origine, propagatione, et duratione. But this opinion has been strongly opposed by Ant. Van. Dale, de Oraculis Ethn. vet. by Fontenelle, and many others, who have solved the answers of the oracles into sacerdotal fraud.

V. Of the gods who presided over oracles and divinations, the most eminent were Jupiter^q and Apollo.^r

(^q) All events were imputed to necessity, or destiny, i. e. to the will of Jupiter. Spanhem. ad Callim. h. in Del. v. 122, p. 418. Hence Jupiter is styled by Homer, πανουφάιος, the author of all oracular information, 'Ιλ. Θ, 250. Prometheus takes to himself the invention of oracles, in Æsch. Prom. vincit. v. 476.

VI. All the oracles were not delivered in the same manner. In some places the answers were given by interpreters.^s In others, the gods themselves revealed their will, either viva voce,^t or by dreams,^u or lots.^v But we will here give a particular description of some of the most famous oracles.

THE ORACLE OF DODONA.

I. THE Dodonean oracle was the most ancient.^a It was so called from Dodona, a city of Chaonia, or Molossis, a mountainous part of Epirus;^b or, according to some geographers, of Thessaly.^c

(^a) Herodot. II, p. 124.

(^b) All Epirus is often included in Chaonia; perhaps, because the Chaonians were in old times masters of Epirus, Strab. VII, p. 224. Molossis was a country of Epirus, in which was Dodona, Strab. l. c. Steph. Byz. in Δωδώνη. But Pausan. Attic. c. 17, p. 40, places Dodona in Thesprotis; so does Eustath. ad Dionys. p. m. 229.

(^c) Luc. Holsten. in not. et castig. ad Steph. Spanhem. ad Callim. h. in Del. v. 284.

II. It is said, the Pelasgians built Dodona, and established its oracle.^d

(^d) Spanhem. ad Callim. h. in Del. v. 284, p. 496. Strab. VII, p. 226.

III. There are different conjectures on the etymology of the word Dodona. Some derive it from Dodanim, the son of Javan, who, they say, settled a colony in that part of Epirus:^e others, from the fountain Dodone:^f others, from the Dodonean dove, or rather from a woman of that name, who was brought from Phœnicia into Greece.^g And others, from different origins.^h

(^g) Spanhem. ad Callim. h. in Del. v. 284, p. 497.

IV. There was near Dodona a forest of oaks, which was consecrated to Jupiter, and which superstition had revered from time immemorial.ⁱ It was reported that these oaks were endued with speech, and conveyed the answers of the god^j in the following manner:—In this forest there was an oak higher than the rest, on the top of which two doves commonly perched, and gave answers to those who came to consult them.^k

(^l) The moderns talk much of the forest, but the ancients only mention the oak, δρῦς, Homer. 'Οδ. Ξ, 328. Δωδώνις φηγός, the Dodonean beech, Apollon. Rhod. I, 526, and IV, 583. Herodotus says that a priestess consecrated to Jupiter a beech which grew near Dodona, II, p. 125. Lucian. in Amor. p. 896, likewise mentions the beech of Dodona. Zenodotus, apud Steph. also says that it was a beech which gave the first oracle at Dodona, ἐν Δωδώνῃ πρῶτον φηγός ἐμαντεύετο.

But some of the Latin poets speak of the innumerable oaks of Dodona, Ovid. Amor. III, 10, 9. Others, of the forest of Dodona, Lucan. III, 441. Others, of the woods of the Molossi, Stat. Theb. III, v. 475. And of the Chaonian forest, Theb. VI, 99.

(^j) Hom. 'Οδ. Ξ, 328, and T, 297. Æschylus alludes to this fable, Prometh. v. 857, τέρας τ' ἄπιστον, αἱ προσήγοροι δρῦες, the incredible prodigy, the vocal oaks.

(^k) See Sophocle. Trach. 176, and Schol. ad h. l.

V. But this is only repeating fables. Can we believe that trees formerly, any more than at present, had the faculty of speech; or that doves ever predicted futurity?¹

(^l) This is nearly the reasoning of Herodotus, II, p. 126.

VI. The truth is this. In early times, there were diviners who were called ὑποφήται, prophets, ἀνιπτόποδες, (from not washing their feet,) χαμαιεῦναι, (from reclining upon the ground), Ἕλλοι and Σελλοι, Τομάραι and Τομούροι.^m These diviners, when they were consulted, ascended an oak, from the top of which they gave their answers.ⁿ Hence arose the fable of the prophetic oak.

(^m) These names we find in Strabo, VII, p. 227. Hom. 'Ιλ. II, 233. Callim. h. in Del. 284, and 94, p. 401.

(ⁿ) These diviners were men, according to Strabo, l. c.

VII. Afterwards, old women were appointed to this office.^o And, as in the Thessalian tongue, these female diviners were named πελειάδες,^p which word likewise signifies doves,^q this equivocal meaning gave rise to the fable of the prophetic doves.^r

(^o) Strab. VII, p. 227.

(^p) Pausan. Phocic. XII, p. 828. Vossius, de Orig. et Progr. Idolol. I, 7, p. 54. [Hesychius says, the Πέλειαι are περιστεραι, doves, and these the prophetesses at Dodona. But the inhabitants of Cos and Epirus called aged persons, πέλειοι.]

(^q) Ælian. V. H. I, 15. Herodotus, II, p. 125, gives another explanation.

(^r) Dickinson, Delph. Phœnix. c. IX.

VIII. Two prodigies had contributed to render this oracle famous: its fountain, and its caldron. The fountain, which was considered sacred, would, like all other fountains, extinguish a torch, if plunged into it; but had the peculiar property of lighting a torch at some distance from its water.^s (*) Pompon. Mela, II, 3; I, 71. Plin. II, 103. Lucret. VI.

[The same fountain is said to have given oracles by its murmuring, which, says Servius, ad Virg. Æn. III, 466, an old woman, by name Pelias, interpreted to those seeking responses.]

IX. Its caldron, or caldrons, were of brass, and gave a continual sound, either occasioned by the wind, or some other agent.^t From the surprising property of this caldron came the proverb, χαλκεῖον Δωδωναῖον, which was applied to garrulous persons.^u

(^t) Callim. h. in Del. p. 286, calls it ἀσίγητος λέβης, the caldron which is never silent: others, λέβης θεσπρωταῖος or θεσπρώτιος, which Clemens Alex. Theodoretus, and Eusebius, consider as referring to a different circumstance. Callim. in Fragm. apud Steph. THE DELPHIC ORACLE.

I. THE Delphic oracle was the most famous of them all.^a It gave its answers at Delphi, a city of Phocis.^b In that city was the famous temple of Pythian Apollo,^c enriched with treasures and offerings.^d The place in which the oracles were delivered, was called Pythium;^e the priestess who delivered them, Pythia;^f and the games in honour of Apollo, the Pythian Games.^g

II. Different origins are given to the word, Pythian. Etymologists derive it from the serpent Python;^h or from the verb πυθέσθαι, to consult;ⁱ or from πύθεσθαι, to rot;^j but its true root is Πυθῶ, which is a name of the city of Delphi.^k

III. This oracle was very ancient. It flourished about a hundred years before the Trojan war.^l At first, it belonged to Themis; and, next, to Apollo.^m

(l) Strabo, l. IX, p. 287, to prove the antiquity of this oracle, goes as far back as to Agamemnon, who, according to Homer, consulted it, Ὀδ. Θ, 79. Tzetz. ad Lycoph. 208. But it existed in the time of the Argonauts; as may be proved by Apollon. Rhod. IV, 536. And if any credit is to be given to fabulous authors, the oracle of Themis, to which succeeded that of Apollo, existed in the time of Deucalion. Ovid. Met. I, 367.

IV. Some authors have asserted that a flock of goats gave rise to the oracle. They tell us that on mount Parnassus, there was a deep cave, the entrance of which was narrow; that the goats, when they approached this entrance, began to skip and scream; that the goat-herd, while he was surprised at the prodigy, found himself seized with a kind of frenzy, or divine enthusiasm, which opened futurity to his view: that a tripod was placed at the opening of the cavern, and a temple built there.ⁿ

XI. The first and most famous of these was Phemonoë. Oracles were first delivered by her in heroic verse.^y

On the question, whether the oracles were silent after the birth of Christ, consult Casaub. Antibar. Exercit. I, 12.

(t) The reason of its silence was, either that men grew less credulous, Cic. de Div. II, 57; and Min. Fel. p. 26: or that the Romans restrained their inquiries to their Sibylline books, their haruspices, auspices, and astrological observations, Strabo, XVII, p. 559: or that the kings, dreading future events, imposed silence upon the oracles, Lucan. V, 112. Cic. de Div. II, 57, assigns another reason. Plutarch relates various physical causes, de Orac. def. Many have attributed this silence to the progress of Christianity.

(u) Yet Suetonius says it answered Nero, in Ner. c. 40; and Themistius, Orat. XIX. They who assert that the oracles were then silent, vouch the authority of Lucan. v. 113, and of Juvenal, l. c. Xiphilin. p. 523.

THE ORACLE OF TROPHONIUS.

I. THE famous oracle of Trophonius was in the neighbourhood of Lebadea, a city of Bœotia,^a near to which was a wood, and the oracle, on an eminence that overlooked the wood.

(^a) Liv. XXV, 27. Schol. Aristoph. ad Nub. 508.

(^b) Pausan. Bœot. c. XXXIX, p. 791.

II. It takes its name from Trophonius, the brother of Agamedes,^c who lived near Lebadea, in a subterraneous dwelling, where he pretended to the faculty of predicting future events. He died in that cave, and after his death he was deified as an oracular god.^d

(^c) Pausan. Bœot. c. XXXVII, p. 785.

(^d) Schol. Aristoph. ad Nub. 508, furnishes the particulars above. But he is here opposed by the Scholiast of Pausanias, Bœot. c. XXXVIII, p. 786.

III. This oracle owed its fame to one Saon, mentioned by Pausanias.^e

(^e) Bœot. c. XL, p. 793.

IV. It was in a cave, and from its situation took the name of καταβάσιον.^f

(^f) Suidas in Τροφώνιος.

V. Peculiar ceremonies of purification were to be performed by the person who came to consult the oracle. He was to offer appointed sacrifices, to anoint himself with oil, and bathe in a certain river. After these preliminaries, clothed in a linen robe, and with a honeyed cake in his hands, he descended into the cave by a narrow passage.^g

(^g) We meet with all these particulars, and more, in Pausan. Bœot. XXXIX, p. 789. Schol. Aristoph. ad Nub. 508. Lucian. Dialog. Mort. p. 267. Philostrate. Vit. Apollon. VIII, 19.

VIII. He came out of it astonished, melancholy, and dejected:^j hence the proverb, εις Τροφωνίου μεμάντευται, ηε

THE OTHER ORACLES OF GREECE.

I. BESIDES the three principal oracles of Greece which we have described, that of Amphiaraus was of considerable note, ranked by Herodotus with the five celebrated oracles which Cræsus consulted.^a

(a) Herodot. I, p. 19, sq.

II. It was at Oropus in Attica.^b The name of Amphiaraus was given it, because Amphiaraus, the son of Oicleus,^c a magician^d and interpreter of dreams,^e who, after his death, being worshipped as a god, gave oracles there,^f in a temple erected to his divinity.^g

DIVINATIONS.

I. AFTER having given a summary account of the oracles, we shall now proceed to the other divinations; of which the following were the principal.^a

(^a) Divination is termed in Greek, μαντική. Jamblich. de myst. III, 1; and Th. Gale, p. 214. Cic. de Div. I, 1, gives a definition of divination. Xenophon. Ἀπομνημ. I, 1, § 3. Fabric. Bibliogr. Antiq. c. 12, p. 415. For the various kinds, Josephus, apud Galeum. ad Jamblich. de myst. p. 215.

II. Οἰωνιστική, divination by the singing and flight of birds.^b In this pretended science, the right was considered propitious; and the left, unfortunate.^c They who professed this kind of divination, were called οἰωνοσκόποι.^d

(^b) Or augury. Suidas in οἰωνιστικοί. Spanhem. ad Callim. h. in Pallad. p. 618. Jamblich. de myst. III, 16, p. 80. Plut. de solertia anim. p. 975. Jamblich. de myst. III, 15, thus defines this divination, τέχνη τῆς θήρας τοῦ μέλλοντος ἐκ ὀρνίθων, the art of inquiring into futurity by birds. [Eagles, vultures, hawks, falcons, owls, ravens, crows, swallows, doves, &c. were considered ominous birds. They were called ταυνοπτερυγες, præpetes, when the omen was taken from their flight; but when from their singing or chirping, ὠδικαί, oscines.]

(c) Cic. de Div. II, 39. Spanhem. ad Callim. h. in Pallad. 124. Hom. 'Ιλ. M, 239, explains the right and the left in this divination.

(d) They were likewise styled θεοπρόποι οἰωνισταί, Hom. 'Ιλ. N, 70, vet. Gloss. οἰωνοπόλοι, 'Ιλ. A, 69. Pausan. Attic. 34, ἀγαθοὶ διαγνώναι πτησεῖς ὀρνίθων, skilled in distinguishing the flight of birds.

III. Divination by dreams. The professors of this divination were called ὄνειροπόλοι,^e and ὄνειροσκόποι.^f

(e) Hom. 'Ιλ. A, 63. Pausan. Attic. 34, defines them, ἀγαθοὶ ὄνειράτα ἐξηγήσασθαι, skilled in interpreting dreams; and, Eliac. prior. c. 23, ἐνυπνίων ἐξηγηταί, interpreters of dreams.

(f) Also ὄνειροκρίται, Theocrit. Idyll. XXI, 33: and ὄνειροκριτικοί. Artemidorus has written a work entitled 'Ονειροκριτικά.

Consult, on the origin of divination by dreams, Justin. XXXVI, 2. Æschyl. Prometh. V. 484. Jamblich. de myst. III, 2, p. 60, takes great pains to evince the excellence of this art. See, on the different kinds of dreams, Macrobian. Somn. Scip. I, 3. And on the veracity of dreams, Broukhus. ad Tibull. III, 4, 7.

IV. Divination by sacrifices, or by the inspection of victims, ιερομαντεία,^g ιεροσκοπία,^h in Latin, extispicium.ⁱ They who practised this art were called ιεροσκόποι.^j

(g) Diodor. Sic. I, 53, calls it μαντική ἐκ τῆς θυτικής, sacrificial divination. Æschyl. Prometh. V. 492.

(h) Diodor. Sic. I, 70, uses the word ιεροσκοπεῖσθαι.

(i) Suet. Ner. 56. Cic. de Div. I, 16. Cic. de Div. II, 12, calls this sort of divination, aruspicina. See Maussac. ad Plutarch. de flum. p. 17, 18, [and Æschyl. Prometh. Vinct. 493—507. It was considered a favourable omen, if the entrails of the victim, as the liver, heart, gall, spleen, lungs, intestines, were sound and entire; in their proper place and situation, and of a natural colour and size. Senec. Ædip. 353. They who obtained propitious omens, were said καλλιερεῖν, litare; and the victims exhibiting these appearances, γίγνεσθαι, or προχωρεῖν, τὰ ἱερά, h. e. καλά.]

(j) Homer calls them, θυοσκόοι, 'Ιλ. Ω, 221. Dion. Halic. II, p. 93, l. 5. Pausan. Attic. XXXIV, p. 84, defines them ἀγαθοὶ διαγνώναι σπλάγχνα ἱερῶν, skilled in reading destiny from the entrails of victims. Perizon. ad Ælian. V. H. II, 31. Eustath. ad. 'Ιλ. Ω, 221. Alex. ab Alex. V, 25. Ad Minuc. Fel. c. 27. Casaub. ad Strab. XVI, p. 524. [Xenophon continually calls the same persons μάντις.]

V. In this kind of divination was included divination by the fire of sacrifices, πυρομαντεία;^k by the smoke, καπνομαντεία;^l by the wine, οἰνομαντεία.^m

VI. Divination by lot, κληρομαντεία;ⁿ in which was included divination by verses, στιχομαντεία;^o and divination by rods, ῥαβδομαντεία.^p

(^a) It consisted in throwing the dice, the fortuitous combination of which they took for the answer of the gods. Pausan. Achaic. XXV, p. 590, describes it. Suet. Tib. XIV; Calig. LVII. (^p) Jamblich. de myst. III, 17; and Gale, ad h. l. p. 238. Herm. Hug. de prima scribendi origine, c. XXVI, p. 238.

VII. There were yet other magical divinations: as, the divination by the dead, νεκρομαντεία;^q to which we must refer σκιομαντεία,^r and ψυχομαντεία.^s

(^q) We meet with this word in Cicero, Tusc. I, 16. Hesychius terms it likewise νεκρομαντεία. Gregor. Naz. in Julian. Orat. III, calls it ψυχαγωγία. We have a specimen of this kind of divination in Homer, Ὀδ. A, 24, which book seems for this reason to have been formerly entitled, Νεκρῶν. Ælian. V. H. XIII, 14. Broukhus. ad Tibull. I, 2, 45, p. 49. Stat. Theb. IV, 413, and Barth. ad h. l. Philostr. in Apollon. IV, 15. (^r) When the dead appeared in an aerial form, like shadows. Potter, II, 18.

(^s) We find this word in Cic. de Div. I, 58. The places where the manes were evoked, were termed Psychomantia, compare Tusc. I, 48. Fabricius, Bibliogr. Antiq. p. 427, is wrong in understanding this word as applied to the art itself.

(^t) Plin. XXXVII, 11. Pausan. Lacon. XXIII, p. 270. Whence is derived Strabo's ὑδρομάντεις, l. XVI, p. 524.

IX. Ὀρνιθομαντεία, or ἀλεκτρομαντεία, divination by the cock.^u

(^u) Ὀρνις is used by Aristophanes for ἀλεκτροῦν, Vesp. 811. Zonaras speaks of this divination, T. III, p. 28. Herm. Hug. de prima scribendi origine, c. 26, p. 239.

X. Κοσκινομαντεία, divination by the sieve.^v

(^v) Theocrit. III, 31. Lucian. T. I, p. 753, in Pseudol. Ælian. Hist. Animal. VIII, 5.

XI. There was another sort of divination, in which they fancied that demons spoke from the bellies or breasts of men. The diviners of this kind had the names of ἐγγαστρίμυθοι,^w στερονομάντεις,^x εὐρυκλεῖς,^y and πύθωνες.^z

CHAP. XV.

PRESAGES.

I. THERE were different kinds of presages. Some were taken from the person himself, whose good or bad fortune they were supposed to portend; some from external objects; and others were inferred from words. Their general term was σύμβολα.^a

(a) Xenoph. Ἀπομνημ. I, 1, § 3. Aristoph. Av. v. 722. Plut. Æmil. Paull. calls the presages, οἰωνά, p. 473. Κληδών has the same signification. The knowledge of presages was called κληδονιστική. See Pontan. ad Macrob. Somn. Scip. I, 12. Barth. ad Claudian. in Eutrop. I, 125.

II. The presages taken from the person to whom they were supposed to relate, were (1) palpitations, παλμοί, in the heart or eyes;^b (2) βόμβος, a ringing in the ears;^c (3) πταρμός, sneezing.^d

(b) Theocr. Idyll. III, 37, and Casaub. ad h. l. Plaut. Pseudol. I, 1, 105, and Taubman. ad h. l. Suidas in παλμικὸν οἰώνισμα. Melampus is said to have written a treatise entitled, περὶ παλμῶν μαντική πρὸς Πτολεμαῖον βασιλέα, presages from palpitations addressed to king Ptolemy.

(c) This word, with the signification here given it, seems to be taken from the ode of Sappho in Longinus, Sect. 10, βομβεῦσ' ἐν δ' ἀκοαί μοι, which Catullus renders, sonitu suoapte tinnunt aures. Aristænet. II, 13. Οὐκ ἐβόμβει σοι τὰ ὦτα, ὅτε σοῦ μετὰ δακρύων ἐμνήμην. Virgil. in Catal. in Scalig. Auson. lect. I, 16. Plin. XVIII, 2, calls it, tinnitus aurium. Cels. VI, 7, n. 8, sonitus aurium.

(d) Theocrit. VII, 96, and Schol. ad h. l. Aristot. probl. sect. XXXIII, § 7, and II. Ouzelius, ad Min. Fel. Octav. c. 26, p. 268. [Xenoph. Exped. Cyri, III, 2, 9. Casaub. ad Athen. p. 137.]

III. Presages were likewise taken from external objects: for instance, from any uncommon splendour,^e or unforeseen accident,^f from a monstrous birth,^g the meeting of a weasel, or any thing ominous.^h

(e) Hom. Ὀδ. T. 36. Liv. I, 39, 41.

(f) Pausan. Messen. XIII, p. 311. Plut. Camill. p. 132. Diod. Sic. XVII, 10, p. 494.

(g) This is evident from the Romans: Jul. Obsequens, de Prodigiiis, c. 96. Plin. VII, 16. Phædr. III, 3. Broukhus. ad Tibull. II, 5, v. 80. It is likewise evident from the Greeks: Plut. Conviv. sept. Sap. p. 149, gives us almost the same anecdote of Thales which Phædrus relates of Æsop, III, 3.

(b) Called ἐνόδια σύμβολα, the meeting something on the way considered to be ominous. Theophrast. Charact. Ethic. c. 17, περὶ Δεισιδαιμονίας, and Casaub. ad h. l. Plaut. Stich. III, 2, 7. Terent. Phorm. IV, 4, 16. Aristoph. Concion. v. 787. Horat. Od. III, 27. [Concerning omens from the meeting particular men, see Van. Dale, l. l. p. 370.]

IV. Presages were also drawn from words: as they were favourable or the reverse, good or bad omens were deduced.ⁱ The favourable words were termed ὄπται,^j κληδόνες,^k and φῆμαι.^l

(ⁱ) Examples of good omens are to be met with in Herodotus, IX, 90. Plutarch. Paul. Æmil. p. 473. And of bad omens in Euripides, Phænis. 1500; and Ion. 1189.

(^j) Perhaps the right word is ὄσσαι. Hesych. ὄσσα, κληδῶν, καὶ φήμη. And ὄσσάσθαι, κληδονίσασθαι.

(^k) Pausan. Beot. c. XI, p. 733.

(^l) Euripid. Ion. 99. Aristoph. Vesp. 860.

V. The words of bad presage were called κακαὶ ὄπται,^m and δυσφημίαι.ⁿ

(^m) Perhaps κακαὶ ὄσσαι, verba male ominata, or nominata, in the language of Horace, Od. III, 14, v. 11.

(ⁿ) They were likewise termed βλασφημίαι. Eurip. Ion. v. 1189; and Hecub. v. 182, φροίμια κακά, the prelude of evil. Suidas calls them, δυσκληδόνιστα, δυσώνυμα. See Casaub. ad Theophr. Charact. Ethic. c. 19, περὶ δυσχερείας.

CHAP. XVI.

THE FESTIVALS OF THE GREEKS.

I. THE Grecian festivals and games were likewise acts of religion. I shall treat of them concisely, and begin with the festivals.

II. The festivals were instituted in honour of the gods; either to thank them for some important benefit, and to celebrate their praises; ^a or, in memory of the dead who had done signal services to their country; ^b [or to render the gods propitious; or for recreation and rest from toil; or to preserve and establish society, by their tendency to unite mankind together, and cherish the generous affections.]

(^a) The Thesmophoria and feasts of Eleusis were instituted in honour of Ceres, to thank her for the laws she had given the Greeks, and for instructing them in agriculture. Diod. Sic. V, 68, p. 336. Cic. de Legg. II, 14. Macrob. Saturn. III, 12. For the origin of festivals, see Plat. de Legg. II. Athen. VIII, p. 363. Strabo, IX, 642.

(b) Such were those in honour of Theseus, Θήσεια; and of Hercules, Ἡράκλεια. Aristoph. Ran. 664.

III. In early times, the number of festivals was very limited, being, for the most part, confined to those which were celebrated after the harvest and vintage.^c

(c) Homer calls them θαλύσια, Ἰλ. I, 530, and Schol. ad h. l. Eustathius remarks, that by some rhetoricians they are termed συγκομιστήρια. Theocrit. Idyll. VII. Aristot. ad Nicom. VIII, 11.

IV. But, afterwards, their number was augmented with that of the gods; particularly among the Athenians, who worshipped more deities than any other people of Greece.^d

(d) This has been proved, c. II, § 3. Xenophon observes, this people had more festivals than any of the other Greeks, de reb. Atheniens. in two passages sub fin.

V. Gaiety, mirth, and pleasure were characteristic of these festivals.^e

VI. Most of them were celebrated at the public expense.^f

(f) Xenoph. de rep. Atheniens. sub fin.

VII. The principal ones (for it would be tedious to take notice of them all,) were :^g

Ἄνθεστήρια, a festival, celebrated at Athens, in honour of Bacchus, for three days; viz. on the eleventh, twelfth, and thirteenth of the month Anthesterion. The first day was called πιθοιγία; the second, χόες; and the third, χύτροι.^k

I. Ἀπατούρια, in honour of Bacchus.¹ This word is derived from ἀπάτη, deceit; because this festival was instituted in memory of the stratagem by which Melanthius, king of Athens, conquered Xanthus, king of Bœotia.^m Others make the word ἀπατούρια of the same import with ὀμοπατούρια; because the fathers assembled during this festival, to have the names of their children entered in the public register of the ward.ⁿ

III. The first day was called δόρπεια, on account of the feasts on that day. For δόρπος signifies a feast.^q

IV. The second day was called ἀνάρρυσις, from the sacrifices in honour of Jupiter, φράτριος, the protector of the wards, and of Minerva, to which deities this day was consecrated.^r

(r) Schol. Aristoph. Pac. 890. The word ἀνάρρυσις is derived from ἀναρρύνειν, which has the same signification with σφάζειν, to immolate, according to the explanation of Hesychius; or from ἄνω ἐρύειν, to turn upwards; for, as we have already observed, in the sacrifices made to the celestial gods, the head of the victim was raised and drawn backwards, so as to look towards heaven. Hom. Ἰλ. A, 459, and Schol. ad h. l. Hence the Scholiast of Aristophanes uses indifferently the word ἀνάρρυσις, and ἀνάθυσις, ad Thesmoph. 565. Etymol. Proclus, in Timæum, Comment. I, τὰ δὲ θύματα ἐκάλουν ἀναρρύματα, ἐπειδὴ ἀνελκόμενα καὶ ἐρόμενα ἄνω ἔθυετο.

V. The third day was called κουρεῶτις, from κουρά, a clipping; because on that day the childrens' hair was cut off, before their names were inscribed in the public registers.^s

III. Its object was to consecrate to Diana the young girls, clothed in a yellow robe.^w To perform this ceremony was ἀρκετεύειν, ἀπὸ τῶν ἄρκτων, which was the general appellation of girls consecrated to Diana.^x It was likewise termed δεκατεύειν, because the girls thus consecrated were about ten years of age.^y

Δαφνηφόρια, a novennial festival, celebrated by the Bœotians in honour of Apollo. A branch of olive was carried in procession, adorned with flowers and wreaths of laurel, upon the top of which was fixed a globe of brass, as an emblem of the sun, or Apollo. Attached to this were other smaller globes, to represent the stars; and in the centre was a globe, of smaller size than the one at the top, which represented the moon.^z (^z) Proclus, in Chrestomathia. Pausan. Bœot. c. X, p. 730. Eustath. de Ismen. amor. l. 8 and 9, describes a like festival in honour of Apollo and Daphne.

I. Διονύσια, solemnities in honour of Διόνυσος, Bacchus,^a which were celebrated with greater pomp at Athens than in any other part of Greece.^b

(^a) Hesych. in Διονύσια. These solemnities are often called ὄργια. Βακχία is a general expression for the festivals of this god. Aristoph. Ran. 360. Span. ad h. l.

(^b) This is evident; for their years were numbered by them, Suidas in Διονύσια: the chief archon had the management of them, διαπιθέναι Διονύσια, as Pollux has it, VIII, p. m. 440: and, lastly, the priest of Bacchus was honoured with the first seat at public shows, παρὰ ταῖς θεαῖς προεδρία ἐτετίμητο ὁ ἱερεὺς τοῦ Διονύσου, Schol. Aristoph. ad Ran. 299.

II. In this festival they carried a vase full of wine, adorned with a vine-branch; after the vase, a goat; then a basket of figs; and after all, the φαλλοί.^c

(^c) Plutarch gives us a detail of these particulars, de cupidit. divit. p. 527, D.

[† These φαλλοί were long poles, upon the top of which were exhibited indecent figures.]

III. The worshippers were clad with fawn skins;^d crowned with ivy,^e and vine;^f and carried thyrsi,^g flutes,^h and cymbals:ⁱ some imitated Silenus, Pan, and the Satyrs;^j others, mounted on asses,^k strayed over hills and through deserts,^l leaping^m and howling, εὐοῖ σαβοῖ, εὐοῖ Βάκχε, ἰὼ Βάκχε.ⁿ

Gr.* VI, 3, 4: but, according to Apollodorus, II, 5, 12, this is the act of Eumolpus. On the whole, ancient authors appear to have frequently confounded the two festivals.]

From the passage in Plutarch, l. c. that the women celebrated it on the sixteenth of the month Pyanepsion. Lastly, Aristophanes, l. c. says that the third day was the middle of the festival.

tised in a festival of Vulcan's, termed 'Ηφαιστιαῖα, both on foot and horseback.

See, on the ceremony of the λαμπαδοδρομία, and the λαμπάδαρχοι, who presided over it, Ant. Van Dale, diss. VI, ad Marmora, p. 504, sq.

It appears, that in the Eleusinian mysteries, there was, likewise, another kind of emulation; and that they strove who should light the largest torch, Theophrast. Charact. Eth. c. IV, περὶ ἀδολεσχίας, et ad h. l. Casaub. p. 143, sq.

Christ. Brunings collects from this passage of Theophrastus, that, on the fifth day of the celebration of the mysteries, they ran with torches, and that he who could carry the largest, got the reputation of a robust and courageous man. But this is a strained interpretation. Theophrastus neither speaks of the fifth day of the mysteries, nor of running, nor of the reputation of a robust and courageous man.

IV. The prize of the victor was a vase filled with oil,^p and a wreath from the olive-trees called μορίαί, which grew in the academy, and were sacred to Minerva.^q

GRECIAN GAMES AND COMBATS.

I. THE games of the Greeks were termed ἀγῶνες.^a Their exercises were, running, δρόμος;^b the discus, or quoit, δίσκος; leaping, ἄλμα; boxing, πυγμή; and wrestling, πάλη.^c These five had the general name, πένταθλον, quinquertium.^d But some antiquarians put the contest of the javelin, ἀκόντιον, in the place of boxing.^e

(a) Niceph. Schol. ad Syn. de Insomn. p. 428. Edit. Petavianæ Lutet. Paris. 1633, [† and Aristoph. in Plut.] calls them, Ὀλυμπιακοὶ ἀγῶνες.

(b) We find in Pausanias, δρόμου ἀγῶν, Lacon. XIII, p. 239; Eliac. I, c. 1, p. 376. It is also called ποδωκείη, Anthol. I, 1, epigr. ult.

(c) Virgil speaks of these games, Æn. III, v. 281. Exercent patrias, oleo labente, palæstras Nudati socii. These are the five exercises described by the Schol. ad Anthol. II, 1, epigr. 7. The interpreter of Synesius enumerates, πυγμαίη, πάλη, δρόμος, ἀκόντιον, καὶ δίσκος; omitting ἄλμα. Plautus speaks of some of these exercises, Bacch. I, 1, 33; of more, III, 3, 24; Mostell. I, 2, 73. Brodæus, ad Anthol. I, 1, epigr. ult. Ad Fest. in Pentathlon.

(d) Lucian terms them in general, γυμνάσματα, γυμνάσια, γυμνασμάτων, ἀγῶνες, de Gymn. p. 272. Aristoph. ἀγῶνες γυμνικοί, Plut. 1164. Quintil. II, 21. artes, aut exercitationes palæstricæ; II, 8, 7, sacra certamina. Plut. de Musica, 1140, D, πένταθλον. Festus, quinquertium. Schol. Aristoph. Av. 293, enumerates eight ἀγωνίσματα.

(e) Simonid. in Anthol. I, 1, epigr. ult. in the place of boxing, puts ἄκων, i. e. ἀκόντισμα, the contest of the javelin.

II. Δρόμος, running, was performed in a space of ground called στάδιον, the stadium,^f a distance of 125 paces.^g It is also called αὐλός.^h

(f) Hence Pausan. Messen. IV, 288, calls this contest, ἀγώνισμα σταδίου; and says of one who had conquered in running, ἐνίκα στάδιον δραμῶν, he conquered in running the stadium, Attic. XLIV, p. 106. The runners were called σταδιοδρόμοι, according to the same author, Eliac. II, 20, p. 503. Ad Herenn. calls this race, Olympiacus cursus.

(g) Plin. II, 23. Censorinus, c. XIII, it is true, thinks the Olympic stadium shorter than the Italian, and longer than the Pythian. He makes the Italian stadium six hundred and twenty-five feet, or a hundred and twenty-five paces. Other authors, however, are of opinion, that these three stadia are equal. THE DISCUS OR QUOIT.

I. ΔΙΣΚΟΣ, the quoit, was a sort of round plate,^a three or four digits thick,^b heavy,^c and made of stone, brass, or iron;^d it was sometimes called σόλος.^e

(a) Stat. Theb. VI, 648, calls it, lubrica massæ pondera; and v. 656, orbis. Ovid. Met. X, 184.

(b) We are informed by those who have seen marble statues of men throwing the disk, that it is of this thickness. Consult Hier. Mercurialis, de arte Gymnast. II, 12, p. 123, ed. Ven. 1601.

(c) Hence the expression of Statius, jaculabile dextræ pondus, l. c. v. 658; and molis prægravida, v. 700. See the description of the disk, Lucian. de Gymn. p. 289.

(d) Eustath. Ὀδ. Θ, v. 186, p. 301, ed. Bas.

(e) Hom. Ἴλ. Ψ, 826.

II. It appears to have derived its name from the old verb δίσκειν, for δίκειν, to cast,^f because it was cast into the air.^g

(f) The author of this remark is Eustathius, ad Ἴλ. B, v. 281, p. 260. Eustath. ad Ὀδ. Δ, p. 301, line 20. Euripides uses the word δίκειν for βάλλειν, or καταβάλλειν, Bacch. v. 600.

III. The quoit was thrown by the help of a thong,^h put through a hole in the middle,ⁱ so that it produced a whizzing noise, and had a circular motion.^j

(h) This thong was called, by the Latins, amentum. Eustath. ad Ὀδ. Θ, v. 186, calls it, καλώδιον.

(^l) Eustathius, l. c. Δίσκος, λίθος τετρημένος, καὶ ἔχων ἐκ μέσου καλιώδιον, οὐ ἔχόμενοι οἱ ἀγωνιζόμενοι ἔδικον, ὅ ἐστιν, ἔβαλλον.

(^j) This is inferred by Hier. Mercurial. de arte Gymnas. II, 12, p. 123, from the verse of Propertius, III, 12, 10, missile nunc disci pondus in orbe rotat. The manner of throwing the disk is well described in Philostr. Icon. I, 24, p. 798. [Fabri Agonist. p. 113, sqq.]

IV. To throw the quoit, was called δίσκοις γυμνάζεσθαι,^k ἐρίζειν περὶ δίσκου,^l δισκεύειν,^m δίσκουσ ρίπτειν,ⁿ δίσκουσ βύλλειν,^o δισκοβολεῖν;^p whence comes the word δισκοβόλος, the name given to the combatants.

(^s) Hence Martial calls the disk, discus Spartanus, XIV, 164. Pausanias attributes the invention of it to Perseus, Corinth. XVI, p. 146.

CHAP. XIX.

LEAPING.

I. ἈΛΜΑ, leaping, from the verb ἄλλεσθαι, to leap, was sometimes performed with the hands empty;^a and sometimes with weights of lead, termed ἀλτήρες;^b which were carried either in the hand, on the head, or shoulders.^c

(^b) Aristot. l. c. Mart. XIV, 49. Pausan. Eliac. I, 26, p. 446; c. 27, p. 450. The ἀλτήρες are masses of lead or stone, which they held in their hands and threw into the air, to augment the elasticity of the body in leaping. Lucian. de Gymn. p. 289, calls them, μολυβδῖνες χειροπλήθεις, masses of lead which fill the hands. Juvenal. VI, 421. Sen. ep. XV, LVIII.

(^c) Mercurial. II, 12.

II. The place from whence they leaped, was called βατήρ, limen.^d

(^d) Pollux, III, 30, 151.

III. That to which they leaped, was called τὰ ἔσκαμμένα;^e whence arose the proverbial expression πηδᾶν ὑπὲρ τὰ ἔσκαμμένα, to leap beyond the bounds, which was applied to an extravagant man.^f

(e) Pollux, III, 30, 151. It was likewise called σκάμμα, a ditch; from the verb σκάπτειν, to dig.

(f) Lucian. in Gall. uses this expression, p. 164, which the Scholiast explains ὑπὲρ τὸ ὀρισμένον τι ποιεῖν.

IV. The measure or the rule to be observed in leaping, was termed κανών.^g

BOXING.

I. ΠΥΓΜΗ, boxing, πύκτης^a and πυγμάχος,^b a boxer or pugilist; whence we have πυκτεύειν and πυκταλίζειν.^c The root of all these words is πύξ, using the fists.

(a) Pollux, III, 30, 150. The Latins used the word pycta. Phædr. IV, 24, 5. But, according to the remark of Gudius on this passage, the word pycta signifies the combatant conquered, or crowned. Eustathius is very particular on the etymology of this word, ad 'Ιλ. Ψ, p. 1444, line 2, sqq.

(b) Hom. 'Οδ. Θ, 246; and Eustath. ad 'Ιλ. Ψ, p. 1444, line 8.

II. The pugilists, at first, used only their fists;^d afterwards, the cestus.^e

(d) Mercurial. II, 9, who distinguishes the combat of the cestus from that of boxing; but I think he is mistaken.

(e) The combatants are armed with the cestus as soon as they engage, in Homer. 'Ιλ. Ψ, 684. Apollon. Rhod. II, 50. Virgil. Æn. V, 400. Val. Flacc. IV, 250. Stat. Theb. VI, 720.

III. The cestus was a thong of the hide of a fresh slain ox,^f in which was enclosed massive lead,^g brass,^h or iron:ⁱ it was bound round the arm;^j and termed ἰμάς,^k or ἰμάς βόειος,^l because it was made of the hide of an ox.

(f) Apollon. II, 52. Val. Flacc. IV, 250, calls the cestus, crudis durata volumina tauris. We find a description of the cestus in Mercurial. II, 9; and in Zornius, Biblioth. Antiq. Exerc. p. 904.

WRESTLING.

I. ΠΑΛΗ, wrestling, was performed in the Xystus, a covered portico,^a where two naked wrestlers,^b anointed with oil,^c besprinkled with dust,^d and with their arms intertwined,^e endeavoured to bring each other to the ground.

(^p) It is likewise termed ὀρθία πάλη. Mercurial. II, 8.

(^q) Martial. XIV, 199.

VIII. The παγκράτιον consisted of boxing and wrestling.^r

(^r) Aristot. Rhet. I, 5, § 36. Nicoph. Schol. in Synes. p. 426, παγκράτιον σύνθετον ἐκ πυγμαῖς καὶ πάλης. Plutarch. Sympos. II, qu. 4, p. 638, asserts the same. Lucian. de Gymn. p. 272, τὸ δὲ παίζειν ἀλλήλους ὀρθοστάδην, παγκρατιάξεν λέγομεν. It appears by this passage of Lucian, that the pancratium was erect wrestling and boxing. However, it is very probable that the two kinds of wrestling were included in the pancratium, though Potter is of a different opinion. This subject is particularly discussed by Zeibichius, Athleta παράδοξος, p. 22, and 155. Therefore, the words παγκρατιαστής and πένταθλος, have not the same signification, although confounded by many critics, by Casaub. ad Polyb. Excerpt. Legat. p. 907, where παγκρατιαστής is translated by the Latin quinquertio. See Gell. XIII, 27; also Plutarch. Quæst. Rom. II, 4; and Quintil. Inst. Or. II, 9.

THE FOUR SOLEMN GAMES OF GREECE.

THE OLYMPIC.

I. THERE were four principal games, ἀγῶνες, in Greece, denominated ιεροὶ, sacred;^a the Olympic, Pythian, Isthmian, and Nemean; which only differed from each other by the places in which they were celebrated.^b

(^a) Epigramma Archiæ in Anthol. I, 1, 1. Pollux, III, 30, 153, is very clear on this subject. Pind. Nem. Od. 2, v. 5. They are also called ιερά ἄεθλα. Pindar. Olymp. Od. 8, v. 84, and Od. 13, v. 20. Hence they who gained the victory in these combats, were styled hieronica, Suet. Ner. c. 24, and 25. [There is a list of those who were victorious in these four games at the end of Corsinus, diss. Agonist.] These same combats are likewise called στεφανίται ἀγῶνες. Lycurg. adv. Leocrat. p. 138. XI. The matches were determined by lot in the following manner. A number of little balls were put into a silver vase, (κάλπις),^v on each of which a letter of the alphabet was inscribed. They who drew the same letter contended together. If the number of combatants was uneven, he who drew the odd ball contended at last with the conqueror; and was, for that reason, called ἔφεδρος.^w

(v) In Latin, perhaps, urna.

(w) These particulars may be gathered from Lucian. Hermot. p. 535, where he uses the word ἐφεδρεύειν. Aristoph. Ran. v. 804, has ἔφεδρος, which is here translated, tertiarius. Spanh. ad Callim. p. 419. Spanh. ad Aristoph. Ran. d. l.

XII. At these games, in addition to the five sports in the preceding chapters, were those of horse^x and chariot-racing,^y called ἵπποι κέλητες,^z ἀπήνη,^a κάλπη,^b συνωρίς,^c &c.

(b) Paus. Eliac. prior. IX, p. 395. Pollux, VII, 33, segm. 186, informs us, that the contest with saddled horses was termed κάλπη.

(c) Paus. Eliac. prior. c. VIII, p. 395. We are told by the Schol. Aristoph. ad Nub. v. 15, that a car drawn by two horses was called συνωρίς. [This part of the contest was instituted at a later period, Xenoph. Hist. Gr. I, 2, I. But these contests were continually changing, according to the time of their exhibition. Corsin. l. l. p. 14.]

XIII. There were also literary contests, as those of eloquence,^d poetry,^e &c.^f

(d) Isocrates spoke his panegyric at the Olympic games, which was a work of ten years, Philostr. vit. Sophist. I, 17, p. 505. Georgias, the Leon-tine, gave likewise a fine specimen of his eloquence at these games, Pausan. Eliac. post. XVII, p. 495. For these games the Sophists composed those discourses which were called ἐπιδείξεις, and from the place of recital, Ὀλυμπικοί λόγοι. See Cresollus, III, 6.

(e) Alian. V. H. II, 8, says, that in the ninety-first Olympiad, Xenocles disputed tragical merit with Euripides, and conquered him. Philostr. in Apollon. IV, 24, p. 163, says that Nero defeated his antagonists in the same kind of contest: but Apollonius, ibid. V, 7, p. 192, seems to deny that the palm of tragedy was ever contended for at the Olympic games.

(f) The prize of history was also disputed. Thucydides, when a boy, heard Herodotus recite his history at the Olympic games. Suidas in Θουκυδίδης.

XIV. The prize of the victor in each of these combats was a wreath of wild olive, termed κότινος.^g

(g) Anthol. I, c. 1, epigr. 1. Aristoph. Plut. v. 586, where the dispute on this point is mentioned: for some insisted that the Olympic crown was of wild olive; others, that it was of the beautiful or cultivated olive, ἐλαία καλλιστέφανος. Hemsterhusius.

XV. A prize of small value was chosen that the competitors might be stimulated simply by virtue and glory, and not by the sordid hope of gain.^h

(h) Lucian. de Gymn. p. 273. This reason is there given by Solon, in his defence of the gymnasia of the Greeks against the objections of Anacharsis.

XVI. The glory of the conquerors was truly great and immortal.ⁱ Statues were erected to them at Olympia, in the wood consecrated to Jupiter.^j They were also conducted home in a triumphal car drawn by four horses.^k

(i) Cic. Tusc. Qu. I, 46; II, 17, and Orat. pro Flacco, c. 13, says that the Olympic victories were more glorious than the Roman triumphs. Lucian. de Gymnas. p. 273, makes Solon say, that the conqueror is equal to the gods, ἰσόθεος. Nepos, in præf. Horat. Od. I, I, v. 6. Pindar. Olymp. Od. I, stroph. δ, v. 16, 17:

ὁ νικῶν λοιπὸν ἀμφὶ βίον
ἔχει μελιτόεσσαν εὐδίαν.

(j) For the various statues erected to the conquerors, and the care of the presidents over them, consult Lucian. pro imaginibus, p. 20: and for Jupiter's wood, called ἄλτις, Schmid. ad Pindar. Olymp. Od. X, stroph. γ, v. 5, p. 271. Pausan. Eliac. prior. X, p. 397.

(k) Vitruv. in præf. l. IX, de Architect. The conquerors had also a great many privileges, a detail of which is given us by Paschal. de Coron. VI, 6, 7, and 8. Yet Agesilaus, Plutarch. in Apophth. Lacon. p. 212, thinks the object of these combatants was rather gain than glory. Compare 236, E.

XVII. These games drew together not only all Greece,^l but were likewise frequented by the Egyptians, and those from Libya, Sicily, &c.^m (l) Lucian. de Gymn. p. 274. Diod. Sic. IV, c. 55, p. 256. Hence was given to these games the name πανήγυρις.

(m) This is evident; for we find the inhabitants of Egypt, Cyrene, and Sicily, among the Olympic conquerors, of whom Laur. Rhodomann. has added a list to the chronology of Diod. Sic. Schmid. Prolegom. ad Pindar. Thus Hiero, king of Syracuse, in Sicily, was conqueror in the seventy-third Olympiad, Pindar. Olymp. Pausan. Eliac. prior. VIII, p. 394. Hence Pindar styles Olympia, πάγκοιμος χώρα, Olymp. Od. VI, epod. γ, v. 14. Falmer. Exercit. in Auct. Gr. p. 553, or ad Lucian. Hermotim. p. 590.

CHAP. XXIII.

THE PYTHIAN GAMES.

I. THE Pythian games were celebrated in honour of Pythian Apollo,^a at Delphi,^b which city was also called Πυθώ,^c and hence the word Pythian.

(a) They were instituted by Apollo himself, according to Ovid. Met. I, 445; or by Diomedes, in honour of Apollo, as Pausanias asserts, Corinth.

c. XXXII, p. 186. Clem. Alex. Ehort. ad Græc. calls these games, πανήγυρις ὄφειος, p. 21, C.

(b) Plutarch. περὶ φυγῆς, p. 604, C. In Demetr. p. 908. They were also celebrated at Athens and other places. See Spanhem. Callim. p. 318.

(c) Pausan. Phocic. c. VI, p. 812. Callim. hymn. in Apoll. v. 100. Schmid. Prolegom. in Pindar. Pyth. and Pindar himself, Olymp. Od. XII, epod. v. 8. The prizes were contended for in the Crissæan or Cirrhæan plain, near the city of Delphi. Pind. Pyth. Od. VI, antistr. a, v. 8, 9; and Od. X, epod. a, v. 3, 4. Spanh. Call. h. in Del. v. 178, p. 437.

II. At first, they were celebrated every nine years; which period was called ἐννεαετηρίς, because they returned in the ninth year, after the complete revolution of eight years.^d

(d) Plutarch. Quæst. Gr. p. 293, B, C. Schmid. in Proleg. ad Pind. Pyth. p. 4.

III. Afterwards, they were celebrated every five years; and that period was called πενταετηρίς.^e With this change these games were renewed by the Amphictyons, after they had been omitted for some time.^f

(e) Schmid. in Proleg. ad Pind. Pyth. p. 4. [The first quinquennial Pythian solemnity was in the third year of the forty-eighth Olympiad: but the Pythiads themselves are reckoned from the following celebration which falls in the forty-ninth Olympiad. As to the year of the Olympiad, in which these sports were celebrated, the learned disagree. Dodwell contends, indeed, that it was at the close of every second year, and Scaliger at the beginning of the third; but Corsinus, l. l. p. 53, shows, that it was probably at the end of the third.]

(f) Pausan. Eliac. post. XIV. Strabo, IX, p. 290, and 288. The Amphictyons constituted the general assembly of Greece, Cic. de Invent. II, 23. That assembly decided on public affairs of great importance, Tacit. Ann. IV, 14. Livy styles it, conventus Pylaicus, XXXIII, 5. Strabo gives a particular account of it, IX, p. 289. Harpocrat. at this word. Van Dale, diss. VI. Schmid. in Proleg. ad Pind. Pyth. Pausan. Phocic. VII, p. 815.

IV. The same Amphictyons added the contests of the flute, ἀλωδῖαι, to those of the lyre, κιθαρωδῖαι.^g

V. In the contest of the flute they played the Πυθικὸς νόμος,^h in memory of Apollo's victory over the serpent Python.ⁱ It consisted of five parts: ἀνάκρουσις, ἄμπειρα, κατακελευσμός, ἱαμβοὶ καὶ δάκτυλοι, and συριγμός.^j According to others, it had six: πεῖρος, ἱαμβός, δάκτυλος, κρητικὸς, μητρῶος and σύριγμα.^k

(h) i. e. the Pythian air.

(i) Strabo, IX, p. 290. Pollux, IV, 10, 84.

(j) These are the parts of the Pythian νόμος, enumerated and explained by Strabo, IX, p. 290, with this exception, he has σύριγγες instead of συριγμός. In all these parts they celebrated the victory gained by Apollo over the serpent Python.

(k) This enumeration of the parts of the Pythian νόμος are to be found in the ὑπόθεσις Πυθίων, prefixed to the Pythian odes of Pindar. Pollux differs from these two authors. Franc. Luisin. Parerg. II, c. XI, shows that Ovid alludes to the same, Met. I, 438.

VI. Sometimes they danced to the sound of the lyre, and the dance was divided into five parts, termed *πεῖρα, κατακελευσμός, λαμβικός, σπονδεῖος, καταχόρευσις.*¹

(l) Pollux, IV, 10, 84, considers these five parts as pertaining to the flute alone, τοῦ Πυθικοῦ νόμου τοῦ ἀθητικοῦ μέρη πέντε and makes no mention of the dance to the lyre. Scaliger. Poetic. I, 23, is perhaps the only author who speaks of this dance. Pollux, it is true, mentions a dance to the sound of the flute; but the five parts enumerated by our author seem rather to relate to the song than the dance.

VII. The contests at the Pythian, were the same with those at the Olympic games.^m Horse and chariot-races made a part of the former as well as of the latter.ⁿ At the Pythian games there were also prizes for intellectual merit.^o

(o) Plutar. Sympos. V, probl. 2, p. 674. Plin. VII, 37, says, that Apollodorus distinguished himself at these games, by his skill in grammar, and that he received great honours from the Amphictyons.

VIII. These games were celebrated on the sixth day of the Delphic month Βύσιος,^p which corresponds to the Θαργηλιών of the Athenians.

(p) Schmid. Proleg. ad Pyth. p. 12. Plutarch. Sympos. VIII, 1, p. 717; and Quæst. Gr. p. 292. [Corsin. l. l. p. 63, shows, from the Schol. Pind. that they were celebrated on the seventh day. But whether this solemnity lasted only one day or more, is uncertain. Nevertheless, Corsinus thinks it probable that as the Olympic games, so these also were celebrated during several days.]

IX. The prizes at these games, we are told, when musical excellence alone was disputed, were of silver or gold.^q But when the gymnastic contests were added, a wreath of laurel was made the prize,^r a branch of palm,^s of beech,^t or some apples.^u

(q) This is not indisputably evinced. Schmid. in Proleg. ad. Pyth. asserts it, but does not prove it. Paschal. de Coron. VI, 25, p. 431, grounds his affirmation on two passages of Pindar, in which these crowns are called glittering, Od. II, stroph. α, v. 10; and Od. III, stroph. α, v. 8; but these passages are not decisive. Pausan. Phocic. VII, p. 814, says, that in the later Pythian games, prizes of any value were abolished; and that, instead of them, the conquerors were rewarded with wreaths. But, afterwards, he speaks of a brazen tripod which Echembrotus won at the games of the Amphictyons.

THE NEMEAN GAMES.

I. The Nemean games take their name from Nemea,^a a city and sacred wood of Argolis,^b situated between Cleone and Phlius.^c

(^b) Strabo, VIII, p. 260.

(^c) Strabo, l. c. Plin. VI, 6.

II. These games were τριετηρικοί, i. e. they were celebrated every three years,^d on the twelfth day of the Corinthian month Πάνεμος,^e which corresponds with the Βοηδρομιῶν of the Athenians.^f

(^f) That the month Πάνεμος was the same with the Βοηδρομιῶν of the Athenians, is proved by a letter of Philip's, Demosth. de Coron. But as the month Boedromion answers to our month of August, (Van Dale, diss. VIII, Antiq. p. 595,) and as Pausanias, Corinth. XV, p. 144, says that the Nemean festival was celebrated in winter, a difficulty arises of which the following is the solution. [It appears from most authors that these games were celebrated in every third year, sometimes in winter, sometimes in summer: but in what year of the Olympiad is less certain. Scaliger, Dodwell, and others, think on every first and third: but Corsinus shows that those which happened in the winter, were celebrated towards the close of the second year of the Olympiad, in the Athenian month Gamelion; but those in the summer, at the beginning of the fourth, on the twelfth day of the Athenian month Hecatombæon.]

III. At these games funeral honours^g were paid to the memory of Opheltes,^h called also Archemorus,ⁱ to whom they were at first consecrated. But Hercules afterwards consecrated them to Nemean Jupiter.^j

(ⁱ) He was called Archemorus, because his death was ἀρχὴ μῶρον, a bad omen, to the seven chieftains advancing against Thebes. Schol. ad Pind. in argum. Nem.

(^j) That these games were consecrated to Nemean Jupiter is proved from Pindar. Nem. Od. III, stroph. δ, v. 4, and Schol. ad h. l. But the Scholiast ad Nem. hypoth. 5, adds, that Hercules, after he had slain the Nemean lion, made many changes in these games, and consecrated them to Jupiter.

IV. There were likewise at these games contests of every kind, gymnastic and equestrian.^k

THE ISTHMIAN GAMES.

I. THE Isthmian games were celebrated in the Isthmus of Corinth, (from which they took their name), at the temple of Isthmian Neptune, surrounded with a thick forest of pine.^a

(^a) Strabo, VIII, p. 262. Pausan. Corinth. I, II, p. 111.

(^d) Pausan. Eliac. II, III, p. 458, and XLVI, p. 491. He gives the reason why they did not attend in Eliac. I, II, p. 378.

IV. These games were τριετηρικοί, i. e. they were celebrated every three years;^e though some authors say every five, or every four years.^f

(^f) Plin. IV, 5. Solin. c. 13. Auson. Idyll. 25. Paschal. de Coron. VI, 27, infers from Xenophon. Hist. Gr. IV, p. m. 410, that they were celebrated every year. [The Isthmian games were not quinquennial, as some write, nor annual, (an error which Suidas has fallen into) but triennial, of which those in the summer happen in the first year of every Olympiad, in the Corinthian month Πάνεμος, which, according to Corsinus, from whom this is taken, answers to the Hecatombæon of the Athenians; but those in the winter, in the month Munychion or Thargelion in the third year of the Olympiad.]

V. Contests of every kind were practised at these, as at the other sacred games.^g

(^g) This is proved by a passage of Diogenes in Dion. Chrysostom. de Isthm. Orat. 9; ego multos vici præclaros antagonistas, non cujusmodi sunt ista mancipia quæ hic (in ludis Isthmicis) quidem lucta, disco, cursu vincunt; sed longe acriores, paupertatem, &c.

VI. The prize was, at first, a crown of pine;^h afterwards, of dry parsley;ⁱ and, at length, the crown of pine was again resumed.^j

VII. The presidents of these games were, at first, Corinthians; afterwards, inhabitants of Sicyon.^k

(^k) Pausan. Corinth. c. 2, p. 114.

VIII. These games were held in great veneration,^l both on account of their sanctity^m and antiquity.ⁿ

(^l) The celebrity of these games may also arise from another source, Liv. XXXIII, 32. That such was the case, may be inferred from their being continued even after the destruction of Corinth, Pausan. Corinth. c. II, p. 114.

(^m) For they were consecrated to Neptune, as we have already observed.

(ⁿ) The Scholiast of Pindar, in Proleg. Pyth. asserts, that the Isthmian were much more recent than the Pythian games. But Schmid. in Proleg. in Isthm. p. 4, proves the contrary.

CHAP. XXVI.

TIME.

I. As in the description of the festivals and sacred games of the Greeks, we have often had occasion to distinguish months and days, it will be proper, before we treat of their civil government, to explain their manner of dividing time.^a

(^a) Above in c. XXIV, 2; c. XXIII, 8.

II. Time was divided into years, months, and days.^b

(^b) Diog. Laert. I, in vit. Cleob. sect. 91.

IV. The year was divided into twelve months, consisting of thirty and twenty-nine days alternately; the months of thirty days always preceding those of twenty-nine.^e The former were termed πλήρεις, and δεκαφθινοὶ (μῆνες). The latter, κοῖλοι, and ἑναφθινοί.^f

V. These are their names :

7. Ποσειδεῶν, a month of thirty days, [corresponding with the Macedonian Audynæus.]ⁿ

(ⁿ) According to Gaza this is the seventh: but Harpocration makes it the sixth, with whom Petau, Scaliger, [and Corsinus], agree.

8. Γαμηλιῶν, a month of twenty-nine days, [corresponding with the Macedonian Peritius.]^o

12. Σκροφοριῶν, a month of twenty-nine days, [corresponding with the Macedonian Panemus.]^s

(^s) Harpocrat. in Σκίρον.

VI. Every month was divided into τρία δεχήμερα, three decades of days.^t The first was called μηνὸς ἱσταμένου,^u or ἀρχομένου; the second, μηνὸς μεσοῦντος; the third, μηνὸς φθίνοντος.^v

(^t) Pollux, I, 7, 63. Theod. Gaza, περὶ μηνῶν, p. 134. Periz. ad Ælian. V. H. II, 25. Kust. ad Aristoph. Nub. v. 1129.

(^u) Ἴστασθαι here signifies to begin. Homer uses it in this sense, Ὀδ. Ξ, 162.

(^v) See the authors already cited, l. c.

VII. The first day of the first decade was termed νεομηνία; the second, δευτέρα ἱσταμένου; the third, τρίτη ἱσταμένου; and so on to the δεκάτη ἱσταμένου.^w (^w) The Schol. Aristoph. ad Nub. v. 1132, makes νεομηνία synonymous with ἔνη καὶ νέα; but he is wrong. Spanh. ad h. l.

VIII. The first day of the second decade, which was the eleventh day of the month, was called πρώτη μεσοῦντος,^x οἱ πρώτη ἐπὶ δέκα;^y the second, δευτέρα μεσοῦντος, οἱ δευτέρα ἐπὶ δέκα, &c. &c.

(x) Pollux, I, 7, 63.

(y) Schol. Aristoph. ad Nub. v. 1129.

IX. The first day of the third decade was called πρώτη ἐπ' εικάδι;^z the second, δευτέρα ἐπ' εικάδι, &c.

(z) Pollux, I, 7, 63.

X. Sometimes they inverted the numbers, in this manner: the first of the last decade was φθίνοντος, παυομένου, or λήγοντος δεκάτη;^a the second, φθίνοντος ἐννάτη; the third, φθίνοντος ὀγδόη; and so of the rest until the last, which Solon gave the appellation of ἔνη καὶ νέα, the old and the new,^b because one part of that day belonged to the old, and the other to the new moon. But after the time of Demetrius Poliorcetes, the last day of the month was termed from his name, ἡμηγριάς.^c

PART II.

THE CIVIL GOVERNMENT OF THE ATHENIANS.

CHAP. I.

REGAL AUTHORITY.

I. Most of the Grecian states were at first governed by kings,^a who were chosen by the people,^b to decide private quarrels,^c and to exercise a power which was limited by laws.^d They commanded the armies in time of war,^e and presided over the worship of the gods, &c.^f

(a) Aristot. Polit. I, 2. Dionys. Hal. Archæol. V, p. 336, l. 46. Pausan. Beot. I, p. 712.

(b) Aristot. Polit. III, 14. Thucyd. I, 9, says, that Atreus ascended the throne of Mycenæ, by the choice of the people, βουλομένων τῶν Μυκηναίων.

(c) Hence Homer styles kings, δικασπόλοι, justices, 'Il. A, 238; and θεμιστοπόλοι, lawyers and magistrates, Spanh. ad Callim. h. in Jov. 3. Dionys. Hal. Archæol. V, p. 337. Hesiod. Θ. 85, and Cleric. ad h. l.

(d) Thucyd. I, 13, says that, in early times, hereditary monarchy was ἐπὶ ῥητοῖς γέρασι, not absolute, but limited. Lamb. Bos. Obs. Crit. c. III. Dionys. Hal. Archæol. V, p. 337. Spanh. ad Julian. Orat. I, p. 127. Periz. ad Ælian. V. H. II, 20.

(e) Aristot. Polit. III, 14.

(f) Aristot. l. c. Hence, after the abolition of royalty, there remained in many states of Greece, kings of the sacrifices, βασιλεῖς ἱερῶν. Demosth. in Neær. p. 873, C.

II. This royalty was hereditary.^g

(g) Thucyd. I, 13, calls it, βασιλείαι πατρικαί, which the Scholiast interprets ἀπὸ τῶν πατέρων παραλαμβάνομεναι κατὰ διαδοχὴν γένους, succeeded to, on the death of the father, according to the order of birth. Aristot. Polit. III, 14.

III. Yet the son did not always succeed the father. If the vices of the heir had rendered him odious to the people,^h or the oracle commanded to choose another king,ⁱ he was deprived of the right of succession.

(h) We have an instance of this exclusion in the sons of Temenus, who were not allowed to succeed their father on account of the parricide with which they were polluted. Apollod. II, 8, § 5, p. 145.

(i) Eustath. ad 'Oδ. Γ, 215, p. 122.

IV. The veneration, however, with which the Athenians regarded their king, almost amounted to divine homage;^j inasmuch as he was supposed to hold his sovereignty by the appointment of Jupiter.^k

(j) Homer calls them, ἀγχιθῆοι, διογενεῖς, Διὸ φίλοι, διοτρεφεῖς, and even θεοί. Hom. 'Ιλ. K, 33. Hesiod. Θ. 80.

(k) Hom. 'Ιλ. A, 279; B, 205; I, 98. Callim. h. in Jov. v. 79, and Spanh. ad h. l.

V. The chief ensign of royal dignity was the sceptre, σκῆπτρον,^l termed also ῥάβδος,^m and by the poets sometimes, δόρυ.ⁿ In ancient times, it was only the branch of a tree;^o Homer, however, speaks of its being adorned with studs of gold.^p The top of the sceptre was ornamented with some figure,^q commonly with that of an eagle, the emblem of Jupiter's dominion, to whom that bird was consecrated.^r

(l) Eustath. ad 'Ιλ. A, v. 15, p. 19, l. 15, σημεῖον δὲ βασιλείας, καὶ λόγων καὶ δίκης κατὰ τοὺς παλαιούς τὸ σκῆπτρον ἦν, the sceptre was an ensign of royalty, in speaking, or administering justice. Hence kings are often styled σκηπτούχοι, as in Homer, 'Ιλ. A, 279.

(m) In the Etymologicon, ῥάβδος has the epithet βασιλική.

CHAP. II.

THE ATHENIAN STATE UNDER ITS KINGS.

I. THE form of government at Athens was often changed. That state experienced the different effects of monarchy, tyranny, aristocracy, and democracy.^a

(a) Ælian. V. H. V, c. 13. Strabo, IX, p. 874.

II. In its remotest period it was governed by kings, the first of whom was Cecrops, the Egyptian.^b It is indeed asserted, that Ogyges was the most ancient king of Attica;^c but the time of Cecrops is the highest date in the history and chronology of the Athenians.^d

(b) Oxford Marbles, n. 2. Apollod. III, 13, p. 221, styles Cecrops, ἀντόχθων; but Th. Gale, ad h. l. p. 85, proves that he was an Egyptian. Euseb. Chron. p. 26.

(c) The authors of most credit who make Ogyges king of Attica, are Eusebius, Chron. p. 24. Cedrenus, and Paul Orosius, from whom the passages relating to that point are cited by Scaliger, ad Euseb. p. 20. But Pausan. Bœot. c. V, p. 719; Varro, de R. R. III, 1, and others, assert, that he was king of Thebes, and not of Attica. The poets apply the epithet Ogygian to what relates to Thebes, or to any thing extremely ancient. Barth. ad Stat. Theb. V, v. 518, p. 251. Burman. Ovid. Met. III, 713. Spanh. ad Callim. p. 8. [Also to any thing great and strong. Compare Hesych. and Suidas. Thus ὄρος ὠγύγιον, a vast mountain, Pindar. Nem. Od. VI, 74: ὠγύγιος ἀνθρώπος, a robust man, Heliodor.]

(d) Eusebius and the Oxford Marbles begin with him. Hence, Socrates, speaking of the remotest ancestors of the Athenians, goes no higher than the time of Cecrops. Xenoph. Memorab. III, 5, § 9.

III. After him there was a succession of sixteen kings at Athens:^e Erechtheus, the sixth, was very famous.^f Theseus, the tenth, enlarged and adorned the city; and was, on that account, honoured with the title of the second founder of Athens. He incorporated the people, who were before dispersed in towns and villages, and formed them into one city.^g

(e) We find their names on the Oxford Marbles, n. 2; but more completely in Eusebius, Chron.

(f) He was famous chiefly for two things: for his having entertained Ceres, Stephens in Ἐρεχθία; and because agriculture was first introduced during his reign. There were yet other causes of his celebrity, of which we find a detail in Diod. Sic. I, 49, p. 25. Periz. ad Ælian. V. H. V, 13. Justin. II, 6. Cic. pro Sext. c. XXI. Ernest. *ad Xenoph. IV. He divided the people into three classes: ἐπατριῶται, nobles; γεωμόροι, husbandmen; and δημιουργοί, artizans.^h

(h) Plutarch. Thes. p. 11, C, D.

V. Theseus, in this division of the Athenians, seems to have followed the plan of the Egyptian republic; where the people were also divided into three classes.ⁱ

CHAP. III.

THE ATHENIAN STATE UNDER THE ARCHONS.

I. CODRUS was the last of the Athenian kings.^a After his death, the state was governed by perpetual archons instead of kings.^b

(^a) Vell. Patere. I, 2. Justin. II, 6.

(^b) Euseb. Chron. p. 33, styles them, ἀρχοντες διὰ βίου, archons for life. The first of these archons was Medon, and from his name the rest were called Medontidæ. Vell. Patere. I, 2, 4.

II. They had not an absolute or a regal power; they were ὑπεύθυνοι, amenable to the laws.^c

(^c) Pausan. Messen. V, p. 292.

III. As there was but little difference between the first kings and the perpetual archons, (for they were magistrates for life,) they were sometimes styled βασιλεῖς, and were said βασιλεύειν.^d

(^d) Perizon. ad Ælian. V. H. V, 13.

IV. There were thirteen of these perpetual archons.^e The first was Medon, the son of Codrus, from whom the family of the Medontidæ descended.^f The last was Alcæon, the son of Æschylus.^g This form of government lasted three hundred and fifteen years.^h (^e) Eusebius gives us their names, Chron. p. 33.

(i) Ἀρχόντων δεκαετία, Dionys. Hal. Archæol. I, p. 68. Euseb. Chron. I, p. 39. Vell. Paterc. I, 8.

VII. Eryxias having been banished from public discontent,^l the form of government was again changed, and nine archons were intrusted with the administration of public affairs, whose office was neither perpetual, nor decennial, but annual.^m They were elected by the suffrages of the citizens from the wealthiest and most reputable branches of ancient families.ⁿ

(l) It is not clear whether this change of government took place in consequence of the banishment of Eryxias, on account of some public discontent, or immediately on his death. Meurs. de archont. Athen. VIII, p. 21.

(m) Ἐνιαυσία ἀρχή, Pausan. Eliac. post. c. XIX, p. 500; Messen. c. XV, p. 315, he styles these magistrates, κατ' ἐνιαυτὸν ἀρχοντες. Vell. Paterc. I, 8. Euseb. I, Chron. p. 39, and Scaliger's emendation, p. 74. [The first of these archons was Cleon, in the third year of the twenty-fourth Olympiad. (n) Euseb. Chron. p. m. 155, ἐξ εὐπατριδῶν. Yet Scaliger thinks they were not always chosen from among the nobles, in Animadv. p. 74. In which opinion he is contradicted by Periz. ad Ælian. V. H. V, 13.

VIII. The archons were distinguished both by name and office. The first of them was called ἀρχων, as chief and president of the body.^o Their years were also numbered and registered in the calendar by the names of the ἀρχοντες.^p The second archon was termed βασιλεύς; the third, πολέμαρχος; the remaining six, θεσμοθέται.^q

XI. The office of the polemarch was, first, to superintend the festivals of Diana, Mars, &c.;^w second, the management of war, from which part of his office he derived his title;^x third, the jurisdiction over strangers, as that over the citizens, was vested in the archon.^y

XII. The office of the thesmothetæ was, first, to enforce the execution of justice, and the maintenance of the laws, (from this part of their function they had their title);^z second, to examine and determine some causes; those of calumny, venality of magistrates, adultery, insults, &c. They laid the more weighty causes before superior tribunals.^a

XIII. Each of these novemvirs had a separate jurisdiction:^b but they could only convoke the people when all the nine were assembled.^c

(^b) Sigon. de rep. Athen. IV, 3, p. 538.

(^c) All the power which the kings had at first possessed, and afterwards the archons, was so divided among these novemvirs, that all affairs of state were at their disposal.

XIV. The three first, viz. the archon, the king, and the polemarch, had two assessors, πάρεδροι, assigned to each of them; so that each of the three tribunals had three judges.^d

(^d) Pollux, VIII, 9, 92. Harpocrat. in πάρεδρος. Sigon. de rep. Athen. IV, 3, p. 539.

XV. As the nine archons were, in early times, elected by the suffrages of the people from the nobles; the government, therefore, was aristocratical.^e (^e) Euseb. Chron. p. m. 155, μετὰ τοὺς βασιλεῖς ἄρχοντες ἐνιαυσιαῖοι ἠρέθησαν ἐξ εὐπατριδῶν, after the kings, annual archons were chosen from among the nobles. Plutarch says that Solon was chosen archon by the people, Solon. p. 85, D. But, afterwards, the archons were elected by lot, in which they made use of the bean. Meurs. de Archon. c. IX, p. 30; and particularly, Periz. ad Ælian. V. H. VIII, 10.

XVI. These novemvirs, before they entered upon their office, underwent a strict examination in the senate, on their birth, age, fortune, and conduct.^f They likewise took a solemn oath to observe the laws, and to refuse presents.^g

XVII. As these archons, in process of time, were led more by caprice and prejudice in their decrees, than by the written laws, there arose seditions, animosities, and political evils of every kind.^h To put an end to this confusion, Draco, a wise and virtuous man, was authorised by the people to make a code of laws,ⁱ fifty-three years after the establishment of the nine archons.^j

(^h) I question whether any author has asserted that the laws of Draco took their rise from these causes. Our author seems to have deduced it from the premises. The conclusion, however, is not at all improbable, especially if we consider the severity of Draco's laws, and that such causes have given rise to most legislations. Tacit. Annal. III, 26. Sigon. de rep. Athen. I, 5, p. 480.

(ⁱ) Gell. Noct. Att. XI, 18.

(^j) It is not surprising that authors differ in this point. Suidas, in Δράκων, asserts, that he published his laws in the first year of the thirty-ninth Olympiad. And if we suppose, with Eusebius, that the archons were instituted in the twenty-fourth Olympiad, fifty-seven years elapsed from the establishment of the archons to the publication of Draco's laws.

XVIII. These laws of Draco were remarkable for their severity.^k They were called θεσμοί.^l

(^k) Aristot. Polit. II, 10. Two witty expressions are recorded on the severity of these laws; one of Herodicus, in Aristot. Rhet. II, 23, § 100. Another of Demades, Plutarch, Solon. p. 87, E. To these may be added that of Draco himself, ibid.

(^l) The cause of this appellation was the title of the laws, which was as follows: Θεσμός αἰώνιος τοῖς Ἀθηῖδα νεμομένοις, Κύριος τὸν ἅπαντα χρόνον. Porphyr. περὶ ἀποχῆς, IV, p. 179. Meurs. in Solon. XIII, and Hist. Univers.

XIX. The people being disgusted with these laws, and many public dissensions arising in consequence of their rigour,^m Solon was requested to redress their grievances.ⁿ

CHAP. IV.

THE ATHENIAN GOVERNMENT UNDER SOLON.

I. SOLON being chosen archon, and vested with the legislative power,^a abrogated, on account of their immoderate severity, all the laws of Draco, excepting those against murder,^b in the forty-sixth Olympiad.^c

(^c) Cyrill. in Julian. l. I, p. 12, D. In the third year of that Olympiad, according to Diog. Laert. I, 62: or in the second, according to Eusebius.

II. Thus the form of government was once more remodelled. The power of the nine archons was considerably circumscribed,^d and the lowest of the people were permitted to hear public causes:^e in short, Solon is deemed the first institutor of democracy.^f

(^d) Sigon. de rep. Athen. I, 5, p. 482.

(^f) Sigon. l. c. Aristot. Polit. II, 12. It appears, however, from the passage of Plutarch above cited, that Solon rather strengthened than instituted democracy. This is confirmed by Solon's being appointed by the people to make them laws; and by some verses of his in Plutarch, Solon. p. 88, B.

III. He began his political reformation by publishing a σεισάχθεια,^g that is, a remission of debts.^h

(^g) Plutarch. Solon. p. 86, D.

(^h) Plutarch interprets σεισάχθεια, χρεῶν ἀποκοπή, a remission of debts, παρὰ τὸ ἀποσεισασθαι τὰ βάρη τῶν δανείων, as Hesychius says. Some think that this word does not signify a total remission of debts, but a reduction of usury, and an augmentation of the value of money. Plutarch. Solon. p. 86, D. See also on this subject, Anonym. περὶ ἀπίστων, in Opusc. Mythol. Th. Gale, p. 96. But what Plutarch, l. c. relates of the fraud of Solon's friends, and of the loss which Solon himself sustained, proves that it was a total remission of debts.

IV. Moreover, to facilitate the payment of debts, he made the mina pass for a hundred drachmæ, which before was only worth seventy-five.ⁱ

(ⁱ) Plutarch. Solon. p. 86, D. He says, that Solon both remitted the debts, and at the same time augmented the measures of commodities and the value of money.

V. He let the people remain divided as formerly into four tribes, each of which was subdivided into three curiæ, a curia comprising thirty families. He likewise permitted the division of the whole city into δῆμοι, to remain.^j

(^j) We find references to this division both before and after the time of Solon. Pollux, VIII, 9, segm. 109, enumerates these four tribes; φυλαί: and segm. III, he informs us that each tribe was divided into three parts, promiscuously termed τριττὺς καὶ ἔθνος καὶ φρατρία, and each curia comprised thirty families, ἐκάστου δὲ ἔθνους γένη τριάκοντα κ.τ.λ. On the division into δῆμοι, see Pausan. Attic. XXXI, p. 76. Strabo, IX, p. 274. Eustath. Il. B, 363, p. 181. Sigon. de rep. Athen. II, 2.

VI. But he introduced a new division of the people. For he divided them, according to their rank and fortune, into four classes: first, πεντακοσιομέδιμνοι, whose land yielded five hundred medimni; second, ἱππεῖς, knights; third, ζευγῖται, who were worth two hundred medimni; fourth, θῆτες, the lower orders of the people.^k

VII. The θῆτες, who were more numerous than the three other classes, were admitted to trials and public assemblies with the rest of the people.^l

THE ATHENIAN STATE UNDER PISISTRATUS AND HIS SONS.

I. AFTER the republic had continued in this form for about twenty-four years,^a Pisistratus usurped the government,^b and Solon died the year following.^c

(^a) This is uncertain. If we suppose, with Scaliger, ad Euseb. p. 81, that Solon was chosen archon in the third year of the forty-sixth Olympiad; and, with the Oxford Marbles and Plutarch, that Conias was archon when Pisistratus made himself tyrant of Athens, reckoning the first year of the fifty-fifth Olympiad for his archonship; we shall find that the form of government instituted by Solon lasted somewhat more than twenty-four years. THE ATHENIAN STATE UNDER CLISTHENES.

I. THE Pisistratidæ having been banished eighty-six years after the establishment of the laws of Solon, the form of government was again changed by Clisthenes, who began his project by gaining the people, that he might oppose them to the nobility, of whom Isagoras, the son of Tisamenes, was the favourite.^a

THE STATE OF THE REPUBLIC OF ATHENS, FROM THE TIME OF ALEXANDER THE GREAT TO THAT OF SYLLA.

THE ATHENIAN ASSEMBLIES.

I. 'ΕΚΚΛΗΣΙΑ, the assembly, was a meeting of all the people,^a with whom, when convoked according to law,^b the general administration of affairs was lodged, by a regulation of Solon.^c

(^a) Ammonius: ἐκκλησίαν ἔλεγον οἱ Ἀθηναῖοι τὴν σύνοδον τῶν κατὰ τὴν πόλιν, the Athenians call the general assembly of the inhabitants of their city, ἐκκλησία. Those who came at the appointed time, received three oboli; but such as were late, nothing, Petit. de Legg. Att. p. 286, sqq.]

(^b) To constitute a lawful assembly, it was necessary that it should be convened by the proper magistrate, at the time and place appropriated to that purpose; also, that certain preliminary forms and ceremonies should be observed, of which we shall presently have to speak. *Sigon. de rep. (^c) Demosthen. Orat. contra Neeram, p. 529, says, the people of Athens are masters of whatever is in the city, and may dispose of it as they please. VIII. In early times, any citizen might be admitted a member of this tribunal, provided he was just, virtuous, and religious.^j

(j) That the areopagus existed before the time of Solon, we are convinced by the Oxford marbles, n. 5, 6, 26. But from what class of citizens the areopagites were taken before the time of Solon, we are not exactly informed. Meurs. Areopag. c. III, p. 13, is almost of the same opinion with

XXVII. As soon as the prisoner had received his sentence, he was bound, and led forth to punishment.^p (^p) This undoubtedly was sometimes the case, Lycurg. adv. Leocrat. p. 134, but that this was the general custom, is not so certain. It is evident from the oration of Demosthenes against Conon, p. 730, that criminals were likewise sentenced to banishment by the areopagus. I shall not take particular notice of the objections to this assertion of our author, which are to be found in Meursius, in Areopag. c. IV; and in Ælian. V. H. V, 18.

XXVIII. But before sentence was passed, the criminal was not in chains, and had it in his power, if he despaired of his cause, to avoid punishment by going into exile:^q the only result being, a confiscation of his property.^r

XXIX. This was the oldest tribunal of Greece.^s It is not agreed when it was established:^t some say it was instituted by Solon;^u but they are mistaken: the court of areopagus existed before Solon;^v he only enlarged its authority.^w

(^s) Demosthenes, in Aristocrat. p. 438, C, acknowledges the antiquity of this tribunal by doubting whether he should refer its origin to the heroes, or to the gods themselves.

It is certain, however, by a passage of Pollux, VIII, 10, segm. 125, that Solon gave the areopagites a rank superior even to that of the ephetae, if we are to read in this passage, προκατέστησε, and not προσκατέστησε.

XXX. But Pericles greatly diminished its power.^x He did not, however, annihilate the tribunal; for it existed long after his time.^y

(^x) Plutarch. in Pericl. p. 155, E; and p. 157, A. Aristotel. in Polit. II, 10. Diod. Sic. lib. XI, c. 77, p. 59. We there find that Pericles was assisted by Ephialtes, in lowering the authority of the areopagus.

(^y) Cicero mentions it, ad Fam. XIII, I. Luke, in Acts, XVII, 19. Besides, under the emperors Gratian and Theodosius, 'Ρούφιος Φήστος is styled proconsul of Greece, and areopagite, Inscript. Grut. n. 7, p. 464; which plainly contradicts the opinion of Meursius, that the areopagus was abolished in the reign of Vespasian. Meurs. Areopag. c. III, p. 16. Reinesius remarks, with regard to the inscription which we have cited, that it is probable that this Festus is he whom Valens sent to govern Asia in quality of proconsul, Zosim. IV; and that Ammianus Marcellinus calls him Festus Tridentinus, lib. XXIX, p. 167. He afterwards thinks it more probable that Rufus Festus Avienus is the person meant in the inscription, and that he is perhaps the same whom Ammianus mentions. The passage of Ammianus is in lib. XXIX, p. 563, where Valois makes the same conjectures with Reinesius, on Festus Tridentinus. The passage of Zosimus is in l. IV, c. 15.

CHAP. XII.

THE JURISDICTION OF THE EPHETÆ.

I. THE COURT of ἐφέται was another severe tribunal, and called τὸ δικαστήριον ἐπὶ Παλλαδίῳ, from the Palladium or statue of Minerva.^a

(^a) Demosth. contra Aristocrat. p. 438, C. Harpocrat. in ἐφέται. Hesych. in ἐπὶ Παλλαδίῳ.

II. It is said to have been instituted by Demophoon.^b

(^b) Pausan. Attic. XXVIII, p. 69. Harpocrat. in ἐπὶ Παλλαδίῳ. But Pollux, VIII, 10, segm. 125, attributes the origin of it to Draco. These two authors are reconciled by Krebsius, diss. de ephetis Atheniensium.

III. In early times, not only the Athenians but the Argives also sat as judges at this tribunal.^c

(^c) Harpocrat. in ἐπὶ Παλλαδίῳ.

IV. Draco afterwards excluded the Argives, and only admitted the Athenians.^d

(e) Pollux, l. c. Demosth. adv. Macart. p. 666, A.

(f) Suid. in ἐφέται.

VI. The only alteration which Solon made in this tribunal, was, that he took from it the cognizance of some important causes, which he transferred to the areopagus, to increase the authority of that court.^g

VII. Cases of accidental murder chiefly came under its consideration.^h

VIII. The judges were called ἐφέται, ἀπὸ τοῦ ἐφίεναι, from appealing; because appeals were made from inferior tribunals to this.ⁱ

(i) Pollux, l. c. ὁ Δράκων παρέδωκε τοῖς ἐφέταις τὴν κρίσιν, ἐφέσιμον ἀπὸ τοῦ βασιλέως πεποικώς, Draco instituted the tribunal of the ephetae, to which an appeal might be made from the king, (that is the second archon.) Krebsius, in dissert. approves of this etymology in preference to all others.

IX. These judges were the most respectable persons of the ten tribes, from each of which five citizens were chosen of an irreproachable life, to whom one drawn by lot was added, making in the whole fifty-one.^j

(j) All these particulars are taken from the Schol. Aristoph. ad Plut. v. 277; and it is by this authority that Sigonius is supported de rep. Athen. III, 3, p. 519, whose opinion our author adopts. His strongest argument is, that the description must refer to these ephetae because no other judges were similarly chosen.

But as the objections which Krebsius urges against this opinion of Sigonius are weighty, it is better to confess our ignorance than obstinately to rely upon assertions not sufficiently authenticated.

CHAP. XIII.

THE HELIASTIC JURISDICTION.

I. THE ἡλιαία,^a or ἡλιαστικὸν^b was a very celebrated tribunal at Athens.

(a) Pausan. Attic. XXVIII, p. 69. Holsten. ad Steph. p. 128.

(b) Understand δικαστήριον, tribunal. [But the word ἡλιαία is sometimes used for the δικαστήριον, or portico, in which causes were tried. Demosth. p. 1042, ed. R.]

II. It was so termed because it was exposed in the open air to the rays of the sun.^c

(c) Schol. Aristoph. ad Nub. v. 860. Ulpian. in Timocrat. p. 227, C.

III. To judge at this tribunal, was termed ἡλιαΐζειν;^d the judges, ἡλιασταί.^e

(^d) Aristoph. Lysistr. v. 381.

(^e) Aristoph. Equ. v. 255. Harpocrat. in ἡλιαία.

IV. The number of the judges was not always the same;^f being greater or smaller, as the causes were more or less important.^g

(^f) Pollux, VIII, 11, segm. 123.

(^g) Ulpian. in Timocr. p. 226, B. Petit. ad Legg. Att. p. 309, [or p. 396, where it appears, that the greatest number was 1500, the least 500; and hence the medium 1000, none of whom were under thirty years of age, as may be learnt from the oath which they were obliged to take. But as this court, which represented all the people, took cognizance of other capital offences, so also its jurisdiction extended to matters of religion; for it was at this tribunal that Socrates was condemned, as is shown at large by Bougainville, in Commentariis Inscription. p. 455, ed. German.]

V. The judges were chosen by lot;^h and before they entered upon their office, they took a most solemn oath.ⁱ

(^h) Petit. p. 309. He grounds his assertion on a passage of Demosth. adv. Aristogil. p. 494, A.

(ⁱ) This oath is termed ὕρκος ἡλιαστών, and is to be found in Demosth. adv. Tim. p. 481.

VI. The following is the form of bringing a cause before court. He who wanted to enter an action against any one, asked leave of the thesmothetæ.^j Having obtained it, he summoned the other party by a bailiff, called κλητήρ.^k This was called προσκαλεῖσθαι.^l He then presented his suit to the magistrates in writing.^m

(^j) Petit. in Legg. Att. p. 314. It appears that this permission was not granted till after an examination termed ἀνάκρισις; on which consult Suidas in ἀνάκρισις. Ulpian. in Midian. p. 176, A.

(^m) Ulpian. in Midian. p. 172, B. Demosth. de Cherson. p. 38, B, calls this accusation or indictment, πινάκιον; and Suidas πρόκλησις and γραμματεῖον.

[† The plaintiff was called διώκων; the whole suit, διώξις; the defendant, φεύγων; the indictment before conviction, αἰτία; after conviction, ἐλαγχος; and after condemnation, ἀδίκημα.]

VII. When the judges were assembled, the magistrates went to the court, with the suits or petitions of the plaintiffs, and authorized the judges to try the several causes, which was termed εἰσάγειν δίκας εἰς τὸ δικαστήριον:ⁿ whence δίκη εἰσαγωγίμος.^o

VIII. When the cause was brought before the judges, the accused had four ways to elude judgment, or to have it deferred: they were termed παραγραφῆ,^p ὑπωμοσία,^q ἀντιγραφῆ,^r and ἀντίληξις.^s

(p) Παραγραφῆ, was an objection insisting either that the affair had been judged before, or that it had not been brought before the judges by the magistrates, or that there was no law relating to the point in question. Suidas at this word. Ulpian. in Midian. p. 170, C. Pollux, VIII, 6, segm. 57.

(q) Ὑπωμοσία was an oath taken to obtain a delay. It pleaded sickness, the death of a friend, or some other misfortune. Ulpian. in Midian. p. 170, C. Harpocrat. and Vales. at this word. Palmer and Kuster, ad Aristoph. Eccles. v. 1018.

(r) Ἀντιγραφῆ was a recrimination by which the defendant accused the plaintiff. Pollux, VIII, 6, segm. 58. And Harpocratation.

(s) Ἀντίληξις was when the defendant having not been in court, and consequently not heard the bailiff summon him to appear there, thus escaped judgment, and in the space of two months, brought an action in his turn against the plaintiff. Sigon. de rep. Athen. III, 4, p. 524. Pollux, VIII, 6, segm. 61. Wolf. in Midian. p. 361, C.

IX. If the accused used none of these resources, he and the accuser were obliged to take, each of them, an oath. That of the latter was termed προμοσία; and of the former, ἀνωμοσία.^t

(t) Pollux, VIII, 6, segm. 55, explains these two words. Ulpian. in Orat. de falsa Legat. p. 100, A. Schol. Aristoph. ad Vesp. v. 1036.

X. Besides, each of them was obliged to deposit a certain sum of money, which was termed either πρυτανεία, παράστασις, παρακαταβολή, or ἐπωβελία.^u

(u) All these terms are explained by Pollux, VIII, 6, segm. 38, 39. Sigon. l. c. p. 525. Harpocrat. at these words. Kuster. ad Aristoph. Nub. v. 1134, and v. 1182. [† Πρυτανεία was a fee, paid to the magistrate, for entering the cause into his book. Παράστασις was a drachma deposited in law-suits about small and trivial affairs. Παρακαταβολή was a sum of money deposited by those who sued the state for confiscated goods. Ἐπωβελία was a fine imposed on those who could not prove the indictment which they had brought against their adversaries.]

XI. After these preliminaries, the plaintiff and the defendant,^v or his counsel,^w were permitted to speak. The time which was allowed each of them to plead, was measured by a water-clock.^x

XII. As much water was allowed for the one as for the other.^y And to prevent fraud, the pouring of the water into the water-clock was intrusted to a faithful person, called ἐφύδωρ.^z

CHAP. XIV.

JUDGMENTS AND ACCUSATIONS.

I. THE judgments were either public, or private.

II. The public judgments were termed κατηγορίαι,^a and the private, δίκαι.^b

(^a) They were likewise termed δίκαι δημοσίαι, or δίκαι δημοσία (δεδικασμέναι), Demosth. in Timocrat. p. 469, B. The public judgments were the judgments established for the maintenance of the public laws; and the public laws were laws enacted against public crimes. Salmas. de Modo Usurar. p. 106, sqq.

III. There were different kinds of public judgments :

1. Γραφή, which took cognizance of various public crimes:^c such as φόνος, τραῦμα ἐκ προνοίας, πυρκαϊὰ, φάρμακον, βούλευσις, ιεροσυλία, ἀσέβεια, προδοσίαι, ἐταιρήσις, μοιχεία, ἀγάμιον, ἀσπρρατεία, λειποστράτιον, λειποτάξιον, συκοφαντία, κ.τ.λ. murder, a premeditated wound, arson, poisoning, conspiracy, sacrilege, impiety, treason, fornication, adultery, celibacy, refusing to serve in the wars, desertion of the army, quitting one's post, frivolous accusation, &c.^d

2. Φάσις, was the detection and information given of concealed crimes.^e

(^e) This word is derived from φαίνειν, to show. Sigon. l. c. Pollux, VIII, 6, segm. 47.

3. Ἐνδείξις was the process against those who, without having paid their quota to the public treasury, (and consequently being ἄτιμοι,) offered themselves candidates to bear offices, and to judge the citizens. Every one was permitted to inform against them, ἐνδείκνυσθαι.^f

8. There were also many kinds of private judgments.^k Such as δίκη κακηγορίας, αἰκίας, βίας, παρανοίας,^l κακώσεως, ψευδομαρτυρίας, παρακαταθήκης, συμβολαίων, μισθώσεως οἴκου, ἀπουστασίου, ἀποπομπῆς, κλοπῆς, κ. τ. λ. an action for slander, assault, violence, madness, ill-usage, false witness, deposits, not fulfilling engagements, letting houses, deserting a patron, divorce, theft, &c.

(^k) These are all the private crimes enumerated by Sigonius, who differs very little from Pollux, VIII, 6, segm. 31.

(^l) Instead of παράνοια Sigonius has παροιμία, drunkenness; which reading seems to be supported by a passage of Pollux, VIII, segm. 89. Our author, however, might prefer παράνοια which is to be found in some MSS. and which Jungerm. ad Polluc. approves of. It may be defended from Cicero, de Senect. c. VII, where he says, that Sophocles was summoned before the court by his sons, quod videretur desperare: but especially from Xenoph. in Memorab. I, 2, § 49, and Aristoph. in Nub. v. 843.

CHAP. XV.

PUNISHMENTS USED BY THE ATHENIANS.

I. THE principal, and most usual punishments, were:^a

(^a) All these punishments, τιμήματα, are enumerated by Pollux, VIII, 7, segm. 69, except δουλεία.

1. Ἀτιμία, public infamy.^b

(^b) This punishment is often mentioned in the laws of the Athenians. Diog. Laert. I, 55. In comparing which passage with Æschin. in Timarch. p. 174, C, it appears that those who had been once disgraced with public infamy, lost the right of haranguing the people, of standing candidates for public honours, and all the other privileges of a citizen. Sigon. p. 516, and particularly Krebs. in Commentat. de Stelitis Atheniens. p. 6. [Petit. de Legg. Att. p. 469, sqq.]

2. Δουλεία, servitude, in which the criminal was reduced to the condition of a slave.^c

(^c) This was the punishment of all those who were sold by law. See argument. Orat. Demosth. contra Eubulid. p. 535, C. Plutarch. in Solone, p. 91, A.

3. Στίγματα, marks, which were burnt with a red-hot iron on the forehead, or hands of slaves who had fled from their masters, or committed any other great crime.^d

(d) Lips. Elect. II, 15. Hermann. Hugo, de prima scrib. orig. c. 19, cum Observ. Trotzii, p. 189. Pollux, III, 8, segm. 79. [Dresigii Disput. de usu stigmatum apud veteres.]

4. Στήλη, was engraving the offence of a criminal in large characters on a pillar.^e

(e) Demosth. Philipp. III, p. 49, A. Pollux, VIII, 7, segm. 73. The reader will find this subject thoroughly treated by Krebsius, diss. de Stelitis Atheniens.

5. Δεσμός, fetters, they were of many kinds: first, κύφων, a wooden collar which constrained the criminal to bow down his head,^f called also κλοῖος, and κλωός;^g second, χοῖνιξ, stocks, in which the feet were confined,^h called also ξύλον,ⁱ in Attica, κάλον,^j ποδοκάκη,^k and ποδοστράβη;^l third, σανίς, a plank, to which malefactors were bound fast;^m fourth, τροχός, a wheel, to which the fugitive slaves, or those who were guilty of theft were tied, and beaten with rods.ⁿ

(f) Aristoph. Plut. v. 458, and Schol. It was so named because it made the head, κύφειν, to bend downwards. In Latin, it was termed cuspus, if we credit Salmasius, de M. U. p. 814, or rather Suidas.

(j) Hesychius calls it, κάλιος. And in καλιζωνοι, κάλα, he says, is τὰ ξύλα.

(k) Taylor has edited ποδοκάκη, in Orat. I, Lysiaæ advers. Theomnest. p. 81, where Lysias himself explains these words of the law of Solon, ἐν τῇ ποδοκάκῃ δεδέσθαι, by ἐν τῷ ξύλῳ δεδέσθαι. Demosth. in Timocrat. p. 475, B. Wolf. ad Act. XVI, 24.

6. Φυγή, exile, the banishment of a citizen from his country, without hope of return.^o Yet he might be recalled by the same magistrate who exiled him. The goods of exiled persons were confiscated and sold by auction. The place of exile was not fixed in their sentence.^p

(o) Suidas in ὀστρακισμός.

(p) Schol. Aristoph. ad Equ. v. 851; and ad Vesp. v. 941.

7. Ὀστρακισμός, ostracism, was a peculiar kind of exile, by which a citizen, whose power had grown formidable, was banished from his country for ten years.^q The suffrages were given by tiles or shells, ὄστρακα; whence the word ὀστρακισμός.^r The ostracism was not valid without six thousand of these shells.^s This kind of exile, and that in the general and more extensive sense, were alike in one particular; for each implied banishment out of the country.^t But in other respects they differed: for the goods of the ostracized, τῶν ἐξοστρακισθέντων, were neither confiscated nor sold by auction, as those of the exiled:^u moreover, the ostracized were obliged to reside in a particular place, but the exiled were not.^v It is not certainly known when this punishment was first established. Some consider Hippias as the author of it;^w and others, Clisthenes.^x Hyberbolus, an abandoned man, was the last on whom this sentence, too mild for his guilt, was passed.^y The Syracusans adopted this mode of punishment from the Athenians; but instead of the ὄστρακα they used πέταλα, leaves; whence comes the word πεταλισμός.^z

It is probable that it was instituted by Clisthenes. For Diodorus Siculus says, that ostracism was established after the expulsion of the Pisistratidæ; Harpocration, that Hipparchus, a relation of Pisistratus, was the first who was banished by it. And we are told by Aristotle, l. c. that Clisthenes endeavoured to strengthen the democracy.

CAPITAL PUNISHMENTS.

I. THE capital punishments among the Greeks in general, but particularly among the Athenians, were:

1. Ξίφος, the sword, or beheading.^a

(a) Pollux, VIII, 7, § 71, amongst the ἐργαλεῖα τοῦ δημίου, instruments of the executioner, mentions the ξίφος.

PART III.

MILITARY AFFAIRS.

CHAP. I.

THE ARMY.

I. THE Grecian army consisted of:

1. *Infantry.*2. *Chariot-men.*3. Cavalry.^a

(^a) Ælian. Tactic. c. 2, terms them, τὸ πεζικὸν, τὸ ἐπ' ὄχημάτων, καὶ τὸ ἐφ' ἵππων.

II. There were three kinds of infantry:1. Ὀπλίται, *the heavy-armed soldiers.*2. Ψιλοὶ, the light-armed.

3. Πελασταὶ, targeteers, who were sometimes comprehended under the name of ψιλοὶ, as opposed to ὀπλίται.^b

(^b) Ælian. Tactic. c. 2, p. 14. Arrian. Tactic. p. 10. Suidas in ὀπλίται. Pollux on the pelta, I, 10, segm. 134. Interpr. ad Nepot. Iphicrat. c. I. Liv. XXXI, 36, calls the peltastæ, cetrati.

III. The custom of fighting on chariots,^c seems to have been more ancient among the Greeks than that of fighting on horseback.^d

(c) Arrian. p. 53.

(d) Homer's heroes are always mounted upon chariots, and never upon horses; e. g. 'Ιλ. B, 775; Ψ, 501. Thus the opinion of Lucretius, V, v. 1296, is void of probability. Palæphat. c. I. Hermann. Hug. de Milit. Equ. I, 6, p. 37. Hence Zoilus blames Homer without reason, 'Ιλ. E, 20, in Schol. minor.

IV. Most of their cars or chariots of war were drawn by two horses.^e

(e) Homer. 'Ιλ. E, 195; T, 400. Virg. Æn. VII, 280. Yet sometimes they were drawn by three, Homer. 'Ιλ. Π, 471. [And Hector, as being a skilful chariot-man is in a chariot drawn by four horses, 'Ιλ. Θ, 185. The ἵππεῖς in Homer are generally those who ride in chariots; e. g. 'Ιλ. B, 810.]

V. Every chariot carried two men; from which circumstance it derived its name δίφρος.^f One was ἡνίοχος, the charioteer, who held the reins. The other, παραιβάτης, who directed the charioteer whither he should drive.^g He sometimes descended from the car, in order to come to close quarters.^h

(f) The word δίφρος is of the same import with δίφορος. Eustath. 'Ιλ. P, p. 1154, l. 39.

VI. The Thessalians were the most famous horsemen of all Greece;ⁱ and their cavalry was highly esteemed. We are told that the Lapithæ were the first who thought of mounting a horse. Men on horseback, before people were accustomed to the sight, were deemed prodigies;^j and gave rise to the fables of centaurs, and hippocentaurs.^k

VII. Among the Athenians, no person was admitted into the cavalry, without having previously obtained the consent of one of the ἵππαρχοι, or φύλαρχοι, and the senate of five hundred.^l

(l) Xenoph. Hipparch. p. 753. Lysias, κατὰ Ἀλκιβιάδου λειποταξ. p. 132, uses the word δοκιμασία, when referring to the examination which horsemen were obliged to undergo. Petit. ad Legg. Att. p. 550.

VIII. Two qualifications were required for one to enter the cavalry—fortune and strength.^m

(^m) Xenoph. Hipparch. p. 753. Petit. l. c. p. 552.

XI. Horses worn out with long service, were released; and branded upon the jaw with a mark, called τροχός,^q or τρυσίππιον^r; hence ἐπιβάλλειν τρυσίππιον, to excuse.^s

XII. The horsemen had titles relative to their different armour: as, δορατοφόροι, κοντοφόροι, ἀκροβολισταί, ἵπποτοξόται, ἄμφιπποι, ἐμάχαι, κατάφρακτοι, καὶ μὴ κατάφρακτοι.^t

(^t) All these words are explained by Ælian. in Tact. II, p. 14; by Arrian. p. 15. The ἄμφιπποι [† had two horses, which they rode by turns,] p. 8. The κατάφρακτοι and ἄφρακτοι, [† heavy and light-armed,] p. 13, 14. The ἐμάχαι, [† dragoons,] Hesych. Pollux, I, 10, segm. 132.

XIII. The horses of the κατάφρακτοι, heavy-armed troops, were defended and ornamented with various kinds of armour and trappings: such as προμετωπίδια, παρώτια,^u παρήϊα, προστερνίδια, παραπλευρίδια, παραμηρίδια, παρακνημίδια, στρώματα,^v φάλαρα,^w which were used for the face, ears, cheeks; chest, sides, thighs, legs, for the horseman to sit upon, as trappings both for the horse and rider.

(z) Ulpian. l. c. says eighteen; and Pollux, l. c. twenty. But these authors may be easily reconciled.

XV. The names of the soldiers who were enrolled, were inscribed in a public catalogue.^a To levy soldiers is στρατολογεῖν,^b καταλέγειν,^c καταγράφειν, and καταγραφήν or κατάλογον ποιεῖσθαι.^d

(a) Schol. Aristoph. ad Equ. v. 1366. In Greek, κατάλογος: hence Xenophon. Memorab. III, 4, § 1, has this expression, ἐκ καταλόγου στρατευόμενος, one who was appointed to military service from the catalogue.

(b) Plutarch. in Mario, p. 410, A.

(c) Aristoph. in Equ. v. 1064.

(d) Polyb. de Milit. Rom. c. I, § 2.

XVI. As soon as the young soldier was enrolled, he took the military oath.^e The state furnished him with his buckler and spear.^f

(e) We have the form of the oath in Lycurgus, adv. Leocrat. p. 146; and in Pollux, VIII, 9, segm. 105.

(f) Harpocrat. in περίπολος.

XVII. The new levies made their first expedition round the territories of Attica, which they were to defend against all incursions: hence they were called περίπολοι.^g

(g) Pollux, VIII, 209, segm. 105. Harpocrat. in περίπολος. Aristophanes alludes to this custom in Av. v. 1177. [But after their twentieth year, they might, if occasion required, be called out on foreign service. Petit. de Legg. Att. p. 653, sqq.]

XVIII. Military service lasted forty-two years—from the age of eighteen years to sixty.^h

(h) I cannot here agree with our author. For the law in Ulpian. ad Olynth. III, p. 29, B, enjoins that soldiers serve to the age of forty. And Macrobius seems to have that law in view, in Somn. Scip. I, 6, p. 29, as Lipsius remarks, de Milit. Rom. I, dial. 2. A difficulty arises from the use of λήξις and ήλικία, (see Harpocrat. and Suidas in Ἐπώνυμοι) which has misled Lambert Bos, and Sigon. de rep. Athen. IV, 5, p. 554. But it is completely solved in Petit. ad Legg. Att. p. 549; and though it were not solved, we should abide by the clear and positive terms of the law.

XIX. Citizens advanced in years, and those of a weak constitution, collectors of the public revenue,ⁱ and infamous persons,^j were exempted from military service.

(m) Æschines, contra Ctesiphont. p. 299, B. Petit. p. 556. Suidas in ἀναμαχίου.

XXII. To prevent desertions, marks, termed στίγματα, were imprinted on the hands of the soldiers.ⁿ

(n) This observation belongs rather to Roman than Grecian antiquities. For there were no military stigmata but under the Cæsars. The reader may consult on this custom, Lips. de Milit. Rom. I, 9. Herm. Hug. de Scrib. Orig. c. XIX, p. 196, and the authors cited by Wolf. in Curis Phil. ad Gal. VI, 17. It is true, Ætius of Amida, a Greek physician, has the following words: στίγματα καλοῦσι τὰ ἐπὶ τοῦ προσώπου, ἢ ἄλλου τινὸς μέρους τοῦ σώματος ἐπιγραφόμενα, οἷα τῶν στρατευσόμενων ἐν ταῖς χερσίν, stigmata are marks imprinted on the face, or any other part of the body, as on the hands of soldiers, VIII, 12.

By this passage we see what stigmata were, and that they were made upon the hands. But as this physician lived in the time of Justinian, when the Romans were masters of the world, his testimony is not sufficient to prove that this custom was in use among the Greeks. [Here also consult Dresigii Disput. de Usu stigmatum apud veteres.]

XXIII. In ancient times, every soldier served at his own expence.^o

(o) This is proved by the information of Ulpian. περὶ συντάξεως, p. 50, A, and others, who tell us, that Pericles was the first who procured pay for the soldiers.

XXIV. The Carians were the first of the Greeks who served for pay; a circumstance which drew on them the character of a mercenary, and sordid people:^p hence καρικοὶ and καρίμοιροι are applied to persons of a mean and servile condition.^q

(q) Hesych. at these words. We find a like proverb in Hom. Ἴλ. I, 378. Hemsterh. ad Aristoph. Plut. p. 6.

XXV. But afterwards all the Greeks made war a trade, and received pay not only for serving their own states, but listed themselves under foreign kings, and fought their battles for hire.^r

(r) This custom is often mentioned by Aristophanes, e. g. in Av. v. 1367. Polyæn. III, 9, § 35, and 51. Ælian. V. H. III, 27. Agesilaus serves the king of Egypt, Plutarch. Agesil. p. 616, C, D. Xenoph. Agesil. p. 124.

XXVI. Pericles was the first who introduced pay into the Athenian army.^s

(^s) Ulpian. ad Orat. de Syntax. p. 50, A. Meurs. ad Lycophr. v. 1384.

XXVIII. The infantry, at first, had two oboli a day;^u afterwards, four.^v Hence we have the following proverbial expressions: τετρωβόλου βίος, soldier's fare;^w and τετρωβολίζειν, to engage in warfare.^x

CHAP. II.

ARMS.

I. THEIR arms may be divided into three kinds:

1. Armour, to defend the body.
2. Arms, weapons of offence.
3. Machines, used in sieges.^a

(^a) On the different kinds of arms, see Pollux, I, 10, segm. 133. He gives to arms, offensive and defensive, the general appellation, ὄπλα: and the machines used in sieges he calls μηχανήματα.

II. Armour includes:

1. Περικεφαλαία, the helmet,^b termed also κράνος,^c κόρυς,^d κυνέη.^e

(^f) Hom. 'Ιλ. Γ, v. 332. We have a description of the cuirass in Pausan. Phocic. c. XXVI, p. 863.

3. Ζωστήρ, οἱ ζώνη, the belt.^g

5. Ἄσπις,ⁱ or θυρεός,^j a round, or oblong buckler.

(i) Hom. Ἴλ. E, 453, &c.

(j) Polyæn. VIII, 7, 2. The ἄσπις differed from the θυρεός in form; for the ἄσπις was circular; whereas, the θυρεός was oblong. This subject is treated minutely and accurately by Blasius Caryophilus, de veterum clypeis, Lugd. Bat. 1751.III. The helmet was sometimes of brass; but commonly of the skin of certain animals; and hence called λεοντή, ταυρείη,^k αἰγείη,^l ἀλωπεκέη, κυνέη,^m κ. τ. λ. X. Κνημίδες, the greaves, were of brass,^a iron, or some other metal.^b They were clasped round the lower part of the leg.^c

(b) Of orichalcum (which is a peculiar kind of brass metal, found in mountains), Hesiod. Scut. v. 122. Of tin, Hom. 'Ιλ. Σ, 612.

(c) Hom. 'Ιλ. Γ, 330.

XI. Ἄσπις, the buckler, was made either of wood,^d osier twigs,^e or skins;^f which were covered over with brass.^g

(d) Plin. IV, 40. Servius derives the word clypeus from the Greek καλύπτειν, because it covered or guarded the body, ad Æneid. II, 382. But Pliny, XXXV, 3, derives it from γλύφειν, because the shields were generally embossed with figures. Blas. Caryophilus, de veterum clypeis, Lugd. Batav. 1751.

(e) Virg. Æn. VII, v. 632. Hesych. explains ἰταῖαι, αἱ ἀσπίδες; because in ancient times shields were made of willow. [† Thus in Latin, ferrum is used for ensis; and steel for dagger, in English.]

(f) Hom. 'Ιλ. E, 452; M, 425.

(g) Hom. 'Ιλ. H, 223.

XII. The parts of the buckler were ἄντυξ,^h or ἴτυς, περιφέρεια, κύκλος,ⁱ its utmost round or circumference:^j ὀμφαλός, the boss, a prominent part in the middle:^k τελαμών, a thong reaching across the buckler, whereby it was hung on the shoulder:^l πόρπαξ, a ring, by which it was held.^m In later times, a handle, ὄχανον, was substituted for the ring.ⁿ

XIII. They crowded their bucklers with the representations of birds and quadrupeds: such as, eagles and lions; and even their gods, the sun, moon,^o &c.

(^o) Pliny, XXXV, 3, gives the same account of the Trojan bucklers in general. Thus on the shield of Achilles, the sky, with the moon, and stars, earth, sea, lions, &c. were represented, Hom. Ἴλ. Σ, 478. So also the buckler of Hercules was adorned with different pictures, Hesiod. in Scut. v. 139. Many instances of bucklers of this kind we meet with in Pausanias: e. g. Messen. XVI, p. 319; Phocic. XXVI, p. 863. Schol. Aristoph. ad Ran. v. 960.

XIV. Most of the ancient bucklers were large enough to cover the whole body.^p Hence the epithets, ἀνδρομήκεις,^q and ποδηγεκῆϊς.^r

(^p) Tyrt. Carm. III, v. 23. Virg. Æn. II, v. 227.

XVII. Their arms consisted of:

1. Ἔγχος καὶ δόρυ, the spear or lance.
2. Ξίφος, the sword.
3. Ἀξίνη καὶ πέλεκυς, the battle-axe or halbert.
4. Τόξον, the bow.
5. Ἀκόντιον, the javelin.
6. Σφενδόνη, the sling.^v

(^v) Part of this enumeration we find in Pollux, I, 10, segm. 136. But we shall proceed to treat of each particularly.

XVIII. The ἔγχος καὶ δόρυ, spear or lance, were generally of ash, and sometimes called μελίη.^w The point, αἰχμή, and in Latin cuspis, was of brass;^x as was the other end, σαυρωτήρ, which they used to stick into the ground.^y

(d) In Hom. Ἴλ. N, 612, Pisander attacks Agamemnon with a battle-axe, ἀξίνη. These are both mentioned in Ἴλ. O, 711.

XXII. Τόξον, the bow, was generally of wood;^e the string, νεῦρα, was of horse hair: and hence called ἰππεῖαι.^f In the heroic ages, it was a thong of leather.^g The extremities of the bow, to which the string was tied, were called κοῤῶναι, and usually tipped with gold.^h

XXVI. Hitherto we have treated of the arms which were used in battles. Let us now take a view of the machines which were employed in sieges. They were first called μάγγανα; ^a afterwards, μηχανά.^b

XXVII. The oldest machines were the κλίμακες,^c scaling ladders, by which they ascended the walls.^d

(^d) Veget. IV, 21. On the materials, workmanship, and different forms of these scaling-ladders, consult Stewech. ad Veget. IV, 2, p. 231. Lips. Polioreet. I, 6.

XXVIII. Κριός, the battering ram, was of wood; a hundred or a hundred and twenty feet long.^e It was overlaid with plates of iron; and had a head, called κεφαλή,^f or ἐμβολή,^g of the same metal, resembling that of a ram: whence its name.^h It was used in making a breach.ⁱ

XXIX. Ἐλέπολις was a machine of prodigious bulk, containing smaller engines, from which stones, and other missive weapons were discharged.^j This invention is attributed to Demetrius Poliorcetes.^k (^k) Plutarch seems to give him the invention of it, Demet. p. 897, D; and 898, A. But he employed Epimachus, an Athenian architect, to construct it. Vitruv. l. c.

XXX. Χελώνη, the tortoise, a machine which covered and defended the soldiers from the weapons of the enemy, as the tortoise is by its shell.^l

(^l) We have a description of this machine in Livy, XXXIV, 39; XLIV, 9. Athen. de mach. bell. Turneb. in Advers. XXIII, 33. Vitruv. X, 19. XXXI. Χῶμα was a mount raised higher than the walls of the besieged,^m the sides of which were of stone.ⁿ

(^m) It consisted of earth and other materials, which they threw up near the besieged city: it was constructed that the soldiers might fight from an eminence. Suidas in ἐγείστα. Thucyd. II, 75. Zosim. II, 25.

XXXII. Πύργοι were moveable towers of wood, built upon the mount, which were drawn upon wheels.^o Their tops were covered with hides.^p

(^o) Diod. Sic. XIV, 52, p. 276. Hence, Athenæus calls them, φορητοὶ πύργοι, Turneb. in Advers. XXIII, 31. Vitruv. X, 19, turres ambulatoriæ. Appian. IV, Civil. p. 1011, πύργοι ἐπτυγμένοι, because these towers were made to be taken easily asunder, and to be carried with the other baggage. Vitruv. X, 19. [Concerning the towers and their use in an engagement, consult Xenoph. Cyrop. VI, 1, 52, sqq. VII, 1, 34.]

(^p) The better to resist the weapons of the enemy. Veget. IV, 17.

XXXIII. Γέφραι were osier hurdles which the soldiers held over their heads.^q

(^q) Festus in gerræ. They likewise served to fill the ditches. But for this use they were more roughly wrought than for that above-mentioned. Lips. Poliorcet. I, 7.

XXXIV. Καταπέλται,^r called also ὄμβραλεῖς,^s and βελοστάσεις,^t were machines from which arrows were discharged. The arrows themselves were sometimes called καταπέλται.^u

(^r) Schol. Aristoph. ad Acharn. v. 159, where, instead of πέλτη, I think we should read, καταπέλτη, although Suidas makes the two words synonymous.

(^v) Supply μηχαναί. Diod. Sic. XX, 92, p. 818.

MILITARY OFFICERS.

I. IN the early ages, when most states were governed by kings, the supreme command of the army devolved upon them,^a or they appointed a general, πολέμαρχος.^b And thus it was with the Athenians.^c

(^b) Pausan. Corinth. c. XIV, p. 142; Attic. c. XXXI. Sigon. de rep. Athen. I, 4, p. 477, and Potter, III, 5, tell us, authorized, as they think, by Pausanias, that king Erechtheus, conferred this dignity on Ion. But the same Pausanias informs us, that he was chosen πολέμαρχος by the Athenians, Corinth. l. c. Meurs. Lectt. Attic. VI, 21.

(^c) This we have shewn in the preceding note.

II. But afterwards, when the supreme power was in the hands of the people, each tribe chose a commander, termed στρατηγός. As there were ten tribes, there were ten στρατηγοί.^d Their power was equal, and each, in time of war, had the command in rotation a day. An eleventh, called πολέμαρχος, was added: and if, in a council of war, there were conflicting opinions as to the expediency of any matter, so that the votes were equal, his vote, added to either of the parties, decided the dispute.^e

(^b) Τα διὰ τῆς φωνῆς μηνυόμενα, ore prolata; and σημεῖα ὀρατὰ, sub oculis cadentia. This is Ælian's distinction, c. XXXIV. Arrian. p. 64.

III. The vocal signal was termed σύνθημα; in Latin, tessera. It was a word given by the general to the inferior officers, and by them spread through the whole army as a sign by which to recognize each other.^c

(e) Thucyd. I, 49, and 63. Schol. ad Thucyd. I, 49. Suidas in σημεῖα. [It must be recollected, however, that the σημεῖα, amongst the more ancient Greeks, altogether differed from the standards, carried before the several orders of Roman soldiers: for the Greeks did not use standards of this description. Nor must the eagle of the Persians, mentioned in Xenoph. Cyrop. VII, 1, 4, and Exped. I, 10, 12, be confounded with the eagle of the Roman legions.]

VI. The σημεῖον was likewise a purple coat upon the top of a spear.^f

(f) Polyb. Hist. II, p. 151, D, E. Polyæn. I, 48, § 2. Perhaps this kind of standard was only used by the Romans. See the passage of Plutarch cited by Gronovius, ad Liv. XXII, 45.

VII. The ancient Greeks also, for a signal, made use of fire, πῦρ, or flaming torches, which were thrown from the two armies.^g Those who threw them were called πυρφόροι.^h

CHAP. VI.

MILITARY BOOTY.

I. THE captures made in war were either prisoners, or spoils.

II. The prisoners were called αιχμάλωτοι,^a and δορυάλω-

MILITARY REWARDS AND PUNISHMENTS.

REWARDS.

I. THE rewards conferred on those of distinguished valour, were termed ἀριστεία.^a

(a) Ælian. V. H. V, 19. They were likewise termed ἔπαθλα, νικητήρια, ἐπιβίβια.

II. Soldiers were preferred to the rank of officers; and subaltern officers, to superior ranks.^b

(b) Xenoph. Hipparch. p. 755, l. 19. Hence Nicomachides, in Xenoph. Memorab. III, 4, § 1, complains that he had not been a general, though he had grown old in the service, λοχαγῶν καὶ ταξιαρχῶν, commanding both a λόχος and τάξις, and was covered with wounds. Onosandr. Strateg. c. XXXIII.

III. Gallant actions were praised in songs of triumph and in funeral orations.^c

(c) Thucyd. II, 34. [Consult Petit. Legg. Attic. p. 602, on this passage.] We have an instance of this in Demosthenes, who composed a funeral oration, ἐπιτάφιος λόγος, in honour of the citizens who died in the battle of Chæronea, in Opp. Demosth. p. 152. Lucian. de Luctu.

IV. Crowns were presented on which were inscribed the names of those who had merited them.^d

(d) Demosth. adv. Androtion. p. 428, A. Paschal. de Coron. VII, 5, p. 466.

V. They likewise erected, in honour of the gods, pillars and statues, on which their victories were inscribed.^e

(e) Plut. Cim. p. 482, E; and 483, A.

VI. Πανοπλία, a complete suit of armour; was another reward.^f

(f) Thus Alcibiades having merited, in the judgment of Socrates, the prize of valour at Potidæa, received a crown, and the πανοπλία. Plutarch. Alcib. p. 195, A. The πανοπλία was the armour and arms complete which were used by the heavy-armed soldiers: viz. κυμηίδες, θώραξ, ξίφος, ἀσπίς, κυνέη, and ἔγχος. Hom. Ἰλ. Γ, 330. Virg. Æn. VIII, 620. Ephes. THE NAVY.

I. As the shapes, so also the names of ships were various.

II. Merchant-vessels were called ὀκλάδες,^a and φορτηγοὶ:^b they were of an orbicular form.^c Ships of war had the epithet μακραι,^d as being longer than the former.

XXVIII. Βολίς, the plummet, with which they sounded.^t

(^t) It was a mass of lead fastened to a long cord, with which they sounded. Hence is derived the verb βολίζειν, which we read in Acts, XXVII, 28. Herodot. in Euterp. p. 102, C, calls it, καταπειρητηρήη. Lucil. Satir. incert. n. XI, p. 198, catapirates. Harpocration explains κάθετος, ὁ καθιέμενος εἰς τὸ πέλαγος ἄμνος, which Valesius considers to be a kind of sacrifice: but Reinesius, in a note on the margin of his copy of Harpocration, suggests στάμνος, a water-pot, instead of ἄμνος: thus βολίς and κάθετος may be synonymous. Hesychius favours this conjecture; he says κάθετος is μολιβδός. Kuster. ad Suid. in κάθετος ex Photio. Βολίς is used in a different sense, Lennep. ad Coluth. p. 5.

MARINES.

I. ΠΑΗΡΩΜΑΤΑ,^a ἀντερέται,^b and κωπηλάται,^c were the rowers: of whom the highest tier were called θρανῖται; the middle, ζυγῖται; and the lowest, θαλαμῖται.^d Πρόκωποι were the rowers nearest the prow; ἐπίκωποι, those nearest the stern.^e

II. Ναῦται, mariners, were not employed in rowing; but each had his particuilar duties to perform.^f Some had the care of the sails, ἀρμενισταί;^g others went aloft, σχοινοβάται;^h and the μεσοναῦται were the attendants on the other seamen.ⁱ

PART IV.

PRIVATE LIFE.

CHAP. I.

MARRIAGE.

I. MARRIAGE was considered honourable in several states of Greece,^a and encouraged by their laws.^b He who was averse to marriage, brought discredit upon himself,^c and in some communities was punished.^d

(a) Γάμος τίμιος, Paul. Epist. ad Heb. XIII, 4. It is very easy to prove that the Greeks honoured marriage. They acknowledged the necessity of it, and its sacredness. Plutarch. in Amator. p. 750. Aristot. Æconom. III, and VII. They had established punishments for bachelors, (μισόγαμοι), as we shall soon see. And that they had deities that presided over marriage, is well known. Plutarch. in Αιτίοις, qu. 2. Suidas in τελεία. Thucyd. II, 15, and Schol.

(b) The law, for instance, prohibited the Athenians from marrying women of another state; and also those within certain degrees of consanguinity. There were other regulations relating to marriage, of which we shall presently treat. Hence the expression, a lawful wife, γυνή ή νόμω γημαμένη άνδρί. Ælian. V. H. X, 2.

(c) Siracid. XXXVI, 28.

(d) See, on the punishments enacted by the Athenians for bachelors, Dinarchus, contra Demosth. p. 41: by the Lacedæmonians, Plutarch. in Lac. Apophth. p. 227, E; [especially in Lycurgo, c. 15.] Athen. XIII, 1, p. 555, D. Pollux, III, 4, segm. 48.

II. But in the times of barbarism, before the institution of laws, the intercourse between the sexes was promiscuous.^e

(e) Athen. XIII, 1, p. 555, D. Lucret. V, 960. Horat. Sat. I, 3, v. 109.

III. Cecrops first instituted marriage.^f

(f) Athen. XIII, 1. Schol. Aristoph. ad Plut. v. 773. Some authors assert that for this reason, the epithet διφυής was given to Cecrops.

IV. In process of time, laws were made which forbade the Athenians to intermarry with strangers.^{g h}

VI. Polygamy was prohibited,^j except when the state required it.^k

(j) By a law of Cecrops, Athen. XIII, 1, p. 555, D. Herodot. V, p. 334, says, that Anaxandrides had two wives, in which he directly violated the custom of the Spartans.

(k) Διὰ σπάνιν ἀνθρώπων, when the citizens were few. Athen. XIII, 1, p. 556, A; or διὰ τὸ λειπανδρεῖν, when the state was exhausted of men. Diog. Laert. II, 26; and Suidas in λειπανδρεῖν. Some authors tell us that even Socrates took two wives for the sake of recruiting the state. Euripides is another example. Gell. XV, 20.

VII. Ὁμομήτριοι, brothers and sisters by the same mother, could not marry; whereas, ὁμοπάτριοι, those by the same father, could.^l

Plutarch. Themist. c. 32. But among the Lacedæmonians, if we may credit Philo, de Legg. specialibus, p. 779, it was lawful to marry a sister, who was born of the same mother, but not of the same father.]

MARRIAGE CEREMONIES.

I. THE bridegroom conducted the bride to his house with great pomp. This was termed ἄγειν,^a or ἄγεσθαι γυναιῖκα,^b εἰς οἰκίαν.^c

(a) Ἄγειν is seldom used in this sense. Kuster. de Verbis Mediis. Homer uses ἀνάγειν, to which he adds δόμονδε, 'Οδ. Γ, 272.

(b) Hom. 'Οδ. Ζ, 159, οἰκονδ' ἄγεσθαι. But we find in Ælian, without the addition of οἰκονδε, ἄγεσθαι γαμετήν, V. H. XIII, 13; and ἄγεσθαι γυναιῖκα, XIII, 10.

ADULTERY.

I. MOIXEIA,^a adultery, was a crime common amongst the Greeks, although not committed with impunity: it was forbidden both by fines and punishments.^b

(a) Pausan. Bœot. XXXVI, p. 784.

(b) This is evinced by the examples of Thyestes, Ægisthus, Paris, Phœnix, &c. Senec. Thyest. 680. Hom. Ὀδ. A, 32; Ἰλ. Γ, 39; and I, 451. But adultery was unknown at Sparta, Plut. Lac. Apophth. p. 2—8; and in Lycurg. p. 49, C. [The same author also says, that this chastity and innocence of the women belonged to more ancient times, when as yet corruption had not tainted the commonwealth. Nor is it surprising that adultery was less frequent there, when the laws permitted the subject to borrow another's wife, for the sake of procuring children. Xenoph. de Rep. Lac. c. 1.]

LETTERS.

I. BY γράμματα, letters, we are to understand γραμματική; which, in its early state, consisted in the art of reading and writing with propriety:^a but was afterwards so extended, as to be used in the sense of φιλολογία, comprising history, poetry, &c.^b

MUSIC.

I. ΜΟΥΣΙΚΗ, music, is derived, according to some authors, from the nine muses;^a and according, to others, from the Hebrew word, mosar, which signifies art, science.^b

(^a) Isidor. Hispal. Orig. II, c. XIV.

(^b) Vossius, de Idolol. I, 13. We have other etymologies in Phurnut. de Nat. Deor. c. XIV. Cleric. ad Hesiod. Theog. v. 52, derives it from מוֹסָר motsa, inventress.

II. The Greeks attribute the invention of music to Pythagoras :^c but this is incorrect ;^d for it is certain, from the history of Moses, that Jubal introduced the flute and harp.^e

(c) Isiodor. Hispal. Orig. II, 15, attributes this opinion to the Greeks. Jamblich. de vita Pythag. c. XXVI, and Nicomach. Arithm. p. 171, show how Pythagoras invented it. Macrob. in Somn. Scip. II, 1. Holsten. ad Porphyr. p. 7.

(d) It is not probable that the Greeks thought Pythagoras the author of music. They knew that men who lived before Pythagoras, if they did not invent the art, applied themselves to it. Amphion, for instance, Linus, and others mentioned by Plutarch. de Music. p. 1131, F; and p. 1132, A, B. The Greeks must have only meant that Pythagoras improved music; and, perhaps, reduced it to a system. Vossius, de scientt. Mathem. c. XX, § 2. IV. The tone or mode, whether raised or depressed, in which the musicians sung or played, was termed νόμος.^g

(g) Thucyd. V, 70. Aristoph. Equ. 9. Aristotle inquires why it was so termed, Probl. XIX, n. 28, and Plutarch. de Music. p. 1133, B. According to Aristotle, νόμοι καλοῦνται οἱ μουσικοὶ τρόποι καθ' οὐστίας ἄδομεν, Suid. in νόμοι κιθαρωδικοί.

V. There were four principal νόμοι or modes ; the Phrygian, Lydian, Doric, and Ionic.^h Some authors add a fifth, viz. the Æolic.ⁱ The Phrygian mode was religious ; the Lydian, plaintive ; the Doric, martial ; the Ionic, gay and flowery ; the Æolic, simple.^j The mode with which the soldiers were animated, was likewise termed ὄρθιος.^k

[To music also pertains rhythm: for Plato, l. l. says, τὸ μέλος ἐκ τριῶν ἐστὶ συγκείμενον, λόγον, καὶ ἀρμονίας, καὶ ῥυθμοῦ: whereof rhythm consists in the movement.]

VI. In later times, the term νόμοι, was applied to the songs or hymns, which were sung in these modes.^l

(^l) Schol. Aristoph. ad Equit. v. 9. Spanhem. ad Callim. h. in Del. v. 304, p. 509.

VII. Their music was both vocal and instrumental.^m

(^m) Hence the following definition of music; τέχνη θεωρητικὴ καὶ πρακτικὴ τελείου μέλους καὶ ὀργανικοῦ, Aristid. Quintil. I, p. 6. The music of instruments alone, was called μουσικὴ ψιλή; that of instruments, accompanied by the voice, μουσικὴ μετὰ μελωδίας. Aristot. Polit. VIII, 5. To sing, was in Latin, assa voce canere; and the flutes, when unattended by vocal music, were termed assæ tibie. Dacer. ad Fest. in assa. Pliny informs us who was the first that played on the lyre without singing to it, and who it was that first accompanied that instrument with the voice, VII, 56.

VIII. Their musical instruments were divided into ἐμπνευστὰ, wind instruments; and ἔντατα, stringed instruments.ⁿ

(ⁿ) Pollux, IV, 8, segm. 58. Aristid. Quintil. also, p. 101, distinguishes the ὄργανα ἐμπνευστὰ and κατατεινόμενα; the latter of which he calls, ὄργανα διὰ νεύρων ἠρμωσμένα, p. 107; and νευρόδετα, p. 110.

IX. The three principal instruments of the ancients, were the lyre, the flute, and the pipe.^o

(^o) Aristotle mentions the others, Polit. VIII, 6. Pollux, IV, 9, segm. 59. But according to Plutarch, these are the three principal instruments, de Music. p. 1136.

CHAP. VIII.

THE LYRE.

I. THE lyre was the most famous of the stringed instruments. The Greeks called it, κιθάρα,^a and φόρμιγξ.^b

(^a) Apollo was thought to have been the inventor of this instrument. Bion. Idyll. III, 7. Hence that god is represented in antiques with a lyre in his hand. Periz. ad Ælian. V. H. III, 32. And hence he has the title, φορμικτῆς, Aristoph. Ran. v. 234. We may add, that in ancient times, kings and heroes learned to play upon the lyre: Hercules, and Alexander, for instance. Ælian. V. H. III, 32.

(^b) That κιθάρα and φόρμιγξ were one and the same instrument, is shewn by Eustath. ad 'Il. Σ, p. 1222, l. 38, from Homer, 'Il. Σ, 569. Feithus, in Antiq. Hom. IV, 4, takes κιθάρα for the lyre; and, amongst other authorities, he has a passage of Aristophanes to strengthen his conjecture, Nub. 1358. But he is opposed by Periz. ad Ælian. III, 32. The difference of the two instruments is differently explained. Some critics tell us that the lyre had always a hollow for the sake of the sound; instead of which, there were two bars either of wood or iron, for the strings of the κιθάρα, which went across, the one on the upper, and the other on the lower part of the instrument. Also, that it had two handles, one on each side. These are the principal distinctions between the lyre and κιθάρα. But the reader will find more in Blanchin. diss. de tribus generibus Musicæ veterum organicæ, c. II, § 10, p. 29. Rom. 1742.

II. To it they sung the exploits of heroes,^c and love.^d

(e) Eustath. ad Hom. 'Ιλ. O, 570, p. 1222, l. 52.

(f) Homer. 'Οδ. Φ, 408.

IV. The strings were, at first, three; whence it was termed τρίχορδος:^g but it was afterwards improved, and had seven strings; it then had the epithets, ἐπτάχορδος,^h ἐπτάφθογγος,ⁱ ἐπτάγλωσσος.^j

(g) Stephen. in 'Ασία, says, the κιθάρα, with three strings, was invented at Asia, a city of Lydia. Hence it is called 'Ασιὰς by Aristoph. Thesmoph. v. 126. Plutarch. de Music. p. 1137, A.

FOOD.

I. THE principal and most necessary food with the ancient Greeks, as with us, was ἄρτος, bread.^a Hence ἄρτος was sometimes used for any kind of food or drink.^b By Homer and other authors bread is also metonymically termed σῆτος.^{c d}

(^a) Euripides, cited by Athenæus, IV, 15, p. 158, E, tells us that such food is necessary. On the inventor of bread, see Pausan. Arcad. IV, p. 604. Athen. III, 26, p. 109, A.

V. Ἄλφιτον, barley-meal, (in Latin, polenta), was likewise much used.^j

(j) Eustath. ad 'Ιλ. Α, p. 815, l. 1, considers ἄλφιτον to be ἄλευρον κριθινον; and Suidas in ἄλφιτα, τὸ ἀπὸ νέας κριθῆς ἄλευρον, the meal of new barley. Polenta is the meal of parched barley; or, barley soaked in water, afterwards dried, then fried, and lastly, broken by a mill. Plin. VIII, 7. The portico at Athens where this meal was sold, is called by Hesych. ἀλφίτων στοᾶ and στοᾶ ἀλφιτόπωλις, by Aristoph. Ecclesiaz. 682.

VI. Θρῖον was a composition of rice, cheese, eggs, and honey. It was wrapped in fig leaves; and hence its name.^k

(k) Schol. Aristoph. ad Equit. v. 1100; ad Ran. v. 134, gives rather a different description of this food.

VII. Μυττωτόν was made with cheese, garlic, and eggs, beaten and mixed together.^l

(l) Schol. Aristoph. ad Acharn. v. 173. It had many more ingredients, according to the Schol. ad Equit. 768. Scalig. in Moret. p. 157.

VIII. The poor people excavated their bread for the sake of pouring in broth, which they ate out of it. This sort of bread was called μιστύλλη;^m and hence the verb μιστυλλᾶσθαι.ⁿ The poorer Athenians lived likewise on garlic and onions.^o

[† The prices of corn varied according to time and circumstances. At Athens, they were never again so low as under Solon, when the medimnus was sold for a drachma. In the time of Socrates and Diogenes, a medimnus of barley-meal (ἄλφιτα) was sold for two drachmæ. Maize, as may be gathered from Aristophanes, was at three drachmæ the medimnus, about the ninety-sixth or ninety-seventh Olympiads. These, however, were low prices. We may quote, as moderate, those mentioned in Demosthenes, in Phorm. p. 918, where maize is at five drachmæ. In the oration against Phænippus, p. 1048, barley appears to have been at six drachmæ. Extraordinary prices were, when corn rose to sixteen, and barley to eighteen drachmæ, the medimnus. Boeckh's Public Economy of Athens, vol. I, p. 127—129.]

X. Hitherto we have spoken of bread, and the other aliments which the earth supplied. But let not the reader therefore conclude, that the Greeks were entirely averse to animal food.—They ate flesh commonly roasted,^v seldom boiled;^w especially in the heroic ages.

IV. There were commonly three persons on each couch. The first was at the head of the couch. The second leaned backwards on the bosom of the first, a cushion being put between them. The third reclined on the second in the same manner.^h

(h) As the manner of reclining thus at table was common to the Greeks, the Hebrews, and the Romans, the reader may consult Mercurial's Prints, de Arte Gymn. I, 11; and the commentators on John, XIII, 23; those on Horace, Sat. I, 4, v. 86; and on Virgil, Æn. I, 702. It was considered mean to have more than three or four guests on one couch. Cic. in Pison. 27. Alstorph. de Lect. p. 109, 116; and the authors quoted by Zornius, in Biblioth. Antiq. Exeget. p. 536.

V. The place at the head of the couch was the most honourable among the Greeks.ⁱ

(k) Athen. XV, 3, p. 671, A. But whether the number of guests was ever fixed, is to be questioned. Eustath. ad 'Ιλ. B. p. 144, l. 18.

We have the following convivial rule in Varro: the number of guests should not be less than that of the graces, nor greater than that of the muses, ex Gell. XIII, 11.

VII. When the guests were placed, an equal portion was distributed to each of them. Hence the feast was called δαίς; ^l and he who carved and distributed the meat, δαιτρος,^m and δαιτυμών.ⁿ Yet this equality of distribution was not always observed at entertainments.^o

(m) Hom. 'Οδ. A, 141; Δ, 57.

(n) This word signifies, sometimes, in Homer, συμπότης, a guest. But 'Οδ. Δ, 621, it means the master of a feast. Eustath. ad h. l. p. 190, l. 26; and ad 'Οδ. X, v. 12, p. 771, l. 6. Plutarch. Sympos. II, 10, p. 644, applies δαιτροί to the servants, and δαιτυμών to the master of the feast.

(o) This Athenæus proves by passages from Homer. He cites the distinction paid to Diomedes, Ajax, and others, to whom greater shares, both of meat and drink, were given than to the other guests, I, 11, p. 13, E.

VIII. Drink was likewise, in general, equally distributed as well as meat.^p

XI. Three rounds were drank at table in honour of the gods. The first, in honour of Jupiter; the second, of the heroes or demi-gods; and the third, in honour of Jupiter σωτήρ, the preserver. This last round was likewise called τέλειος.^x

GRECIAN DRESS.

THEIR MANNER OF COVERING AND ADORNING THE HEAD.

GRECIAN GARMENTS.

I. ἘΣΘΗΣ,^a ἔσθημα,^b ἔσθησις,^c and in poetry, εἶμα,^d were the general expressions for clothing. The under garment, both of men and women, was χιτῶν.^e Χιτῶν ὀρθοστάδιος was a straight tunic.^f The χιτῶν was said ἐνδύεσθαι.^g

This quotation by no means supports the signification which Lambert Bos evidently intended ἐνδύεσθαι to have in the text: nor am I aware that it ever occurs in that sense in any classic author. In Herodotus, however, is the following passage: ἅμα δὲ κιθῶνι ἐκδυομένῳ συνεκδύεται καὶ τὴν αἰδῶ γυνή, I, 8; from which it appears that χιτῶν is said ἐκδύεσθαι, to be taken off.]

II. Ladies of rank and fortune, instead of having a seam in the sleeve of the tunic from the shoulder to the hand, used clasps, περόναι,^h and πόρπαι,ⁱ of silver or gold, to keep it close.^j

III. The same also wore the ἔγκυκλον χιτῶνιον.^k

(k) It is not certain whether this was an outer, (ιμάτιον) or an under garment, (χιτῶνιον). In Aristoph. Thesmoph. v. 260, Euripides puts on first the κροκωτός, and next the ἔγκυκλον. But Pausanias, cited by Eustathius, ad Ἴλ. Ξ, p. 964, l. 6, considers it to be an under-garment. Perizon. ad Ælian. V. H. VII, 9. Pollux, VII, 13, segm. 53, and 56. IV. Ἰμάτιον or φάρος,^l was the exterior robe of the men among the Greeks,^m as the toga was among the Romans. It was said περιβάλλεσθαι,ⁿ and ἀναβάλλεσθαι.^o We likewise frequently meet with ἀναβάλλεσθαι ἱμάτιον ἐπ' ἀριστερά, and ἐπὶ δεξιᾷ.^p From the above verbs are derived the substantives, ἀναβόλαιον,^q and περιβόλαιον.^r

TOMBS AND MONUMENTS.

I. THE Greeks used to inter their dead without their cities,^a commonly by the high-ways,^b that they might not be polluted by touching a corpse,^c nor incommoded by its smell.^d

(a) Cic. ad Div. IV, 12, § 9. Liv. XXI, 24. Kirchmann. II, 20, p. 265, who says, on Plato's authority, that in the very early ages, they kept the dead in their houses; a custom which was abolished, and subsisted not in the time of Plato.

(d) This reason is given by Isidorus, Orig. XIV, c. 11.

II. We read, however, that they sometimes buried their dead in an elevated part of the city. But this was an honorary distinction, payed to those who had signalized themselves in the service of their country.^e

(e) Thus the tomb of Themistocles was in the forum of the Magnesians. Plutarch. in Themist. p. 128, C. Thus the Spartans interred Brasidas, from the honour they bore his memory, in their city. Thucyd. V, 11. The same honour was payed to the remains of Euphron. Xenoph. Hellen. VII, p. 495, l. 3.

III. Lycurgus permitted the Lacedæmonians to bury their dead within the city, and even round the temples.^f

IV. They prayed that the earth might lie light on their friends and all illustrious men;^g but that it might press heavy upon their enemies and all the wicked.^h

VIII. Tombs of stone were polished; whence they were called ξεστοὶ τάφοι or τύμβοι.^l

These inscriptions were termed ἐπιγραφαί, Artemid. V, 75. In Latin, tituli. Ovid. Heroid. XIV, 128.

X. They were also frequently adorned with images.^o

(o) Thus, on the tomb of Isocrates, there was the figure of a ram and a siren lying upon it, Plutarch. in Decem Oratoribus, n. 4, p. 838: on the tomb of Diogenes was a dog of Parian marble, Diog. Laert. VI, 78: on that of Archimedes, a sphere and a cylinder, Cic. Tusc. Qu. V, 23. See, in Pollux, VIII, 7, s. 66, the figures with which the tombs of girls were adorned.

XII. Besides these sepulchres, which contained either the corpse, or the ashes and bones of the deceased, they sometimes erected honorary monuments,^s in which were neither bodies, bones, or ashes,^t and which were, therefore, called κεροτάφια,^u and κενήρια.^v

XIII. Of these tombs, some were built in honour of illustrious men interred in other places; ^w and some, in honour of those who had been deprived of sepulture, and whose manes, they imagined, could not rest, unless they raised to them such an empty memorial; ^x to which they invited them thrice, with a loud voice. ^y

(^w) The tomb of Euripides was one of these, Pausan. Attic. II, p. 6.

(^x) Some of these tombs are mentioned by Thucyd. II, 34; and by Xenoph. de Exped. VI, p. 297, l. 54. CHAP. XXIV.

OTHER HONOURS PAID TO THE DEAD.

I. FUNERAL orations, in praise of the deceased, were pronounced at their tombs, ^a particularly if they had rendered important services to their country, ^b or had died, fighting valiantly in battle. ^c

(^a) Lucian. de Luctu, p. 307. For the origin of them, see Plutarch. in Poplicol. p. 102. Dion. Halicarn. Archæol. V, p. 291, l. 5.

(^b) Dionysius Halic. Archæol. V, p. 291, l. 30, compares the funeral eulogiums of the Romans with those of the Athenians, and thinks the former more judicious in bestowing them than the latter. For the Athenians praised only those who had signalized themselves in war; but the Romans celebrated men of merit in every capacity.

(^c) Plato, Menezæn. Thucyd. II, 34. Martial virtue is the subject of the ἐπιτάφιος, or the funeral oration, which is the second of the orations of Lysias, p. 11; and of the λόγος ἐπιτάφιος of Demosthenes, p. 152.

II. Funeral games were instituted to their memory. ^d

(^d) Pausan. Arcad. IV, p. 605, says Azan, an Arcadian, was the first who was honoured with these games. They are celebrated in Homer, 'Ιλ. Ψ,

III. After the obsequies, an entertainment was prepared at the house of the nearest relation,^e which was called περίδειπνον,^f νεκρόδειπνον,^g and τάφος.^h (^e) It was the nearest relation of the deceased who gave the feast, though not in his own house; but in a friend's or neighbour's of the deceased. Demosth. de Coron. p. 335, C. So in Homer, 'Ιλ. Ψ, 28, the funeral entertainment of Patroclus is given in the tent of his friend Achilles.

APPENDIX TO THE ANTIQUITIES.

PART I.—CHAP. I.*

ATHENS.

AT Athens was the Κεραμεικός, Ceramicus, so called ἀπὸ τῆς κεραμεικῆς τέχνης, from the potter's art, which was first invented here. This great space was divided into two parts, one of which was within the city, and contained a number of temples, theatres, &c. the other, in the suburbs, was a public burying place, and contained the Academy, and other public buildings.

Ἄγοραὶ, forums, were very numerous: the chief of which were the old and the new forums. The old forum, called ἀρχαία ἀγορὰ, was in the Ceramicus within the city. Here the assemblies of the people were held. Hither the merchants resorted to sell their goods. Each trade had a separate market: Κύκλος was the place where slaves were sold: Ἰχθυόπωλις ἀγορὰ, the fishmonger's market: Γυναικεία ἀγορὰ, the market for women's apparel and ornaments. This was the most frequented part of the city.

Γυμνάσια, gymnasia, were common throughout Greece. They consisted of a range of spacious buildings, and were erected for the use of philosophers, and rhetoricians; for wrestlers, pugilists, dancers, and others. They were divided into στοαὶ, porticoes, which were filled with ἐξέδραι, side-buildings, and seats for study and conversation: ἐφήβειον, the place where the ἔφηβοι or youths exercised: γυμναστήριον, was the undressing-room: there were hot and cold baths: στάδιον was a large semi-circle, in which public exercises were performed.

Ἀκαδῆμια, the Academy, constituted a part of the Ceramicus without the city. It was adorned with covered walks.

Athens had three harbours for ships:

1. Πειραιεύς, Piræeus. It contained three ὄρμοι, docks; two forums, where the productions of all countries were accumulated; and an arsenal capable of furnishing every thing necessary for the equipment of vessels. It was sufficiently spacious for four hundred galleys to ride in safety.

* These are the chapters in the Antiquities after which those in the Appendix may be read.

2. Μουνυχία, Munychia, a promontory not far from Piræus, and fortified both by nature and art.

3. Φαληρόν, Phalerum, about four miles from the city, which was the most ancient of the three.

PART I.—CHAP. I.

CITIZENS, SOJOURNERS, AND SLAVES.

The inhabitants of Attica were divided into three classes : πολῖται, free citizens ; μέτοικοι, foreigners settled in the country ; and δούλοι, slaves.

The citizens excelled the others in dignity and power, and filled all the offices of government ; but were very much exceeded in number by the slaves.

It was considered the highest honour for a foreigner to obtain the freedom of the city ; which could be done only by rendering great services to the state.

The μέτοικοι were persons, who, having come from a foreign country, had settled with their families in Attica. They were protected by the government, but could neither vote, nor hold any public office.

They were obliged to select from among the citizens a patron, called προστάτης, who was to protect them, and be responsible for their conduct.

They paid an annual tribute to the public treasury of ten or twelve drachmæ.

The slaves were divided into two sorts : those who from poverty, the fate of war, or from perfidy, had been reduced to bondage, and were called θῆτες and πελάται, but who might change their masters, and, if able, release themselves from servitude ; and those who were wholly in the power and at the disposal of their masters.

Slaves were not allowed to imitate the citizens in their dress and behaviour. Particular care was taken that they did not wear arms. The condition of the Athenian slaves was preferable to that of their brethren in any part of Greece.

Their punishments were very severe. For theft they were bound fast to a wheel, and unmercifully beaten with stripes. For any notorious crime they were condemned to grind at the mill, which was a most laborious task.

The Athenian slaves cultivated the lands, conducted the manufactures, worked in the mines, laboured at the quarries, and performed all the domestic offices in private houses.

PART I.—CHAP. V.

OATHS.

Of oaths there were two kinds: the one called ὁ μέγας ὄρκος, the great oath, taken only in matters of great importance; the other, ὁ μικρὸς ὄρκος, the lesser oath.

There were different objects by which the Grecians swore: sometimes, μὰ Δία, by Jupiter; sometimes, μὰ τοὺς δώδεκα θεοὺς, by the twelve great gods. The Spartans usually swore μὰ τῷ Σιώ, by the two gods, i. e. by Castor and Pollux: the Grecian women, by Juno, Diana, or Venus; or νῆ τῷ θεῷ, by the two goddesses, i. e. by Ceres and Proserpine, who were exclusively appropriated to the female sex.

Sometimes they swore by the dead: as in Demosthenes, μὰ τοὺς ἐν Μαραθῶνι, by those who lost their lives in the battle of Marathon.

The manner of swearing was generally by lifting up their hands to heaven. In all agreements they pledged their faith by taking each other by the hand.

In all solemn leagues they sacrificed to the gods. The ceremonies were thus performed. First, they cut some hair from the head of the victim, and distributed it to all present, that they might participate in the oath: secondly, they invoked the gods to witness their oaths: thirdly, killed the victim by cutting its throat: hence the phrase ὄρκια τέμνειν, to make a covenant. Then they repeated the words of the oath to be taken; and made a libation of wine. They concluded by prayer to the gods, that he who should first violate the oath, might die in the same manner as the victim.

The reverence which the Greeks paid to oaths appears from their using the words εὐόρκος and εὐσεβής, as synonymous.

PART I.—CHAP. XXV.

THEATRE, CIRCUS, &c.

The theatres and amphitheatres of the ancient Greeks were very magnificent. The former were round on one side, and terminated, on the other, in a right line; but the latter were of an oval shape, and made, as it were, two theatres joined together.

These structures were immensely large compared to modern theatres; and were calculated to contain not only all the citizens of the state, but strangers also. They had no coverings, and plays were performed by daylight in the open air. In later times, the spectators were protected from the heat of the sun by moveable awnings.

The ὄρχήστρα was a semi-circular space in the centre of the front of the theatre. From this the seats for spectators rose progressively to the very summit of the building.

The actors wore masks, on which was painted the character of the passion intended to be expressed. They were so ingeniously constructed, that great additional strength was given to the voice; and thus the spectators at the greatest distance could hear distinctly. The buildings also were artificially planned to convey sound readily and clearly; though not resembling, yet producing the effect of our modern whispering galleries.

The σκηνὴ occupied all that space between the two horns of the theatre, over the ὄρχήστρα. There were machines for raising and lowering different scenes. Tragic, comic, and satyric pieces had each their different and appropriate representations.

Ἀνάβαθρον was the stage before the σκηνὴ and ὄρχήστρα, on which the actors performed their parts.

The ἵππόδρομος, circus, was devoted to horse and chariot-racing, which were similar to those described in the chapter upon the Olympic games. Besides these races, various kinds of dancing were introduced. The first was called ἐμμέλεια, for the tragic scene; the second, κόρδαξ, for the comic scene; the third, σίκιννις, for the satyric.

PART II.—CHAP. XIII.

THE ἘΦΟΡΟΙ.

The ephors were Lacedæmonian magistrates, and were five in number. They were called ἔφοροι on account of their superintending (διὰ τὸ ἐφορᾶν) all public business of importance: and were elected by the people from among themselves upon the first day of every year; to which year the principal ephor gave his name.

It is the opinion of some that they were created as a check upon the power of the kings: of others, that they were originally designed to assist them in the execution of their duties, especially when engaged in war. But be this as it may, we are certain that, in later times, their authority was nearly absolute. They could suspend the kings and all the magistrates from their offices, and even punish them for the slightest inconsistency. Nor had they less control over private individuals. For these might be summoned to attend their ἀρχεῖον or ἐφορεῖον, in which they administered justice, and in some cases were condemned without trial.

The ephors convened the public assemblies of the people, in which their influence was so great that it almost amounted to dictation. They had the management of the public money, and could declare war or make peace; send out generals and armies or recall them, as circumstances might require; in a word, the whole executive government was vested in them.

All the Spartan magistrates were obliged to give an account of their administration to the ephors, but the ephors were accountable to none. We do not, however, find that they often seriously abused this privilege, except in acquiring fresh authority; which, at length, had become so formidable, that Cleomenes, the son of Leonidas, killed the ephors and entirely abolished the office.

PART II.—CHAP. XVI.

REWARDS.

The chief rewards were :

1. Προεδρία, the privilege of having the front seat in all public assemblies.
2. Εἰκὼν, the honour of having a statue erected in some public place.
3. Στέφανοι, crowns conferred by the votes of the people.
4. Ἀτέλεια, immunity from taxes.
5. Σιτία, παρασιτία, σίτησις ἐν Πρυτανείῳ, an entertainment given at the public expense to those who had deserved well of their country.

PART III.

MANNER OF DECLARING WAR.

Before the Greeks engaged in war, they demanded reparation for injuries by ambassadors, called πρέσβεις.

Heralds, κήρυκες, were then sent to order the enemy to prepare for invasion.

They never engaged in war without the advice of the gods, and consulting the soothsayers. The oracles were enriched with presents, sacrifices offered, and large vows made, to be paid in case of success.

Every omen was observed before marching: an eclipse of the moon would delay an enterprise.

The Lacedæmonians would never march before a full moon.

PART IV.—CHAP. IV:

CONDITION OF FEMALES IN GREECE.

The houses of the Greeks were usually divided into two parts, in which the men and women had distinct apartments assigned to them. The part in which the men lodged, was towards the gate, and called ἀνδρῶν, or ἀνδρωνῆτις; that assigned to the women was termed γυναικῶν, or γυναικωνῆτις; and was the most remote part of the house, and behind the αὐλή, before which there were other apartments, termed πρόδομος and προαύλιον. The women's chambers were called τέγροι θάλαμοι, as being at the top of the house.

They ascended by a κλίμαξ, stair-case, though in Homer this may mean a ladder, as in those days architecture was but little understood.

It was customary for women to have maiden attendants, who, if their mistresses were young, had the care of their education, and were called τροφοί.

The common employments of women were spinning, weaving, and making embroidery. They had the management of provisions and of household affairs generally.

The condition of women in Greece, was by no means such as we should expect it to be among a brave and refined people. That singular contrast of character which made the Athenians, at times, so noble and contemptible, was in nothing more conspicuous, than in the manner in which they treated their females.

They may be divided into two classes: their wives and daughters; and the ἑταῖραι, or courtezans.

The former were treated in the most servile manner; were enjoined the strictest silence in the presence of the men; were not allowed to visit any public shows or amusements; were confined rigorously to the innermost apartments of the house; and were employed in the meanest offices. In short, they were kept in a state of subjection, degradation, and ignorance.

But the latter, αἱ ἑταῖραι, were allowed to visit all the public places of amusement; were accomplished in the arts and sciences; and were visited and courted by the greatest men of the age. The accomplished Pericles, would retire from the affairs of state, to the abode of Aspasia; and even the virtuous and gifted Socrates resorted to her for improvement and instruction in philosophy.

This unnatural and unworthy treatment of these two classes of females, is the greatest stain upon the Athenian character. But the Spartans treated their females with great respect, attention, and delicacy. They were the most warlike, and seem to have been the most gallant people of Greece.

PART IV.—CHAP. IV.

HOUSES, FURNITURE, &c.

Of the form of the Grecian houses we know but little. The general name for house was οἶκος; for the bed-chamber, κοιτών; for the dining-room, ἐστιατόριον, or τρίκλινον.

The men and women had different apartments; those of the former were termed ἀνδρῶνες; those of the latter, γυναικεῖα.

The ancient Greeks had chimneys to their houses, though they were of very rude construction. For windows they used a certain kind of transparent stone.

Their doors, θύρα and πύλη, were hung upon wooden posts, called παραστάδες. Small bells were hung over the doors.

Their sleeping-beds, κλίνη and κοίτη, were at first very simple, but afterwards, costly, having silver feet, and adorned with precious stones. They were very high, and required a ladder, or a set of steps, to get into them.

Their chairs were very much like those of modern times. Stools, with three legs, were much used.

Their chests or trunks for clothing were termed θῆκαι.

The chief kitchen utensils were χαλκεῖον, the large kettle; κακκάβη and χύτρα, the smaller kettle; τηγάνιον, the frying-pan; ὀβελός, the spit; &c.

PART IV.—CHAP. V.

EDUCATION AT SPARTA.

The children of the Lacedæmonians were nourished at home by their parents, until seven years old. They were then considered the property of the state, and educated publicly.

To facilitate this, the head master, παιδονόμος, divided the children into classes, ἀγέλαι. Over each class was an under-master, selected from the εἵρενες, and distinguished for wisdom, courage, and strength. He took the lead in all their sports, games, and youthful excursions. With him they ate and slept.

These classes were subjected to severe discipline. The boys were accustomed to hunt; but dancing, running, wrestling, throwing the quoit and javelin, were exercises practised by both sexes. When these were finished, which were generally as much as their strength could well perform, they returned to dinner.

This, however, they had first to prepare, and, in some measure, to provide with their own hands; for the portion of food allowed by the state was scarcely sufficient to sustain them. But, in order to procure a moderate supply, they were permitted to steal with impunity any provisions they could find, providing they were not caught in the act. Their beds consisted of reeds and bulrushes.

Every citizen who saw a child in fault, was bound to chastise it, under the penalty of suffering the same himself.

The principal part of their education consisted in writing and reading; and being able to express themselves with perspicuity and conciseness.

At the age of eighteen years, they passed from the stage of boyhood to that of youth, being still employed in martial exercises. At twenty they were termed εἴρηνες. They were not considered men until thirty.

The Spartans never exercised any trade or profession, except that of arms. Their slaves, called εἰλωτες, built their houses, tilled their lands, and provided them with food and clothing.

PART IV.—CHAP. VI.

MATERIALS FOR WRITING.

Ink, called μέλαν, or μέλαν γραφικόν, writing ink, was made sometimes from the blood of the cuttle-fish, which was very black; but generally from soot, burnt with rosin and pitch, and diluted. This soot was taken from furnaces constructed on purpose, having no passage for the emission of the smoke. Ink was also made from the lees of wine, dried and burnt.

Paper, the general term for which was χάρτης, was made from several materials. (1.) From the skins of beasts, prepared like our modern parchment: this was the most durable. (2.) From the bark of a tree. (3.) From the Egyptian πάπυρος, from which the English word paper is derived. The papyrus was a kind of flag, which grew in the river Nile. These flags were dipped into the water of this river, which was of a glutinous quality, and then pressed and dried in the sun.

Thin sheets of lead, or layers of wax, were also used for writing: in which case they employed the hard στύλος.

The στύλος, or pen, was made of various substances. When they wrote upon wax, lead, or any hard substance, the στύλος was made of iron or ivory. It was round, with one end large and smooth, for erasing any mistake; the other terminating gradually in a point, with which incisions were made in the plates, similar to modern engraving. When softer substances were used, such as parchment, they wrote with pens made of the quills of birds, or of a small thin reed, called κάλαμος, something like our alder.

PART IV.—CHAP. XIV.

MANNER OF ENTERTAINING STRANGERS.

The Greeks knew nothing of the conveniences and luxuries of a modern hotel: hence all travellers were obliged to depend upon strangers, on their journey; and, therefore, hospitality was considered a great virtue, and its rites were held most sacred.

In the primitive ages, men lived by plundering each other, and a stranger was deemed a lawful prize: hence, the word ξένος signified both a stranger and an enemy. But, afterwards, it was customary to supply them with food, and treat them with every respect.

Salt was commonly set before strangers before they partook of the repast: signifying, that as salt preserves flesh, so the friendship then commenced should be lasting. Salt was supposed to possess a peculiar sanctity: hence, Homer calls it θεῖος ἅλας, divine salt.

Τὸ ὁμοτράπεζον, the eating at the same table, was considered an inviolable obligation to friendship.

It was customary for men, allied by friendship, to give each other σύμβολα, tokens, the producing of which was a recognition of the covenant of hospitality. These tokens were mutual presents and gifts, called ξένια, or δῶρα ξενικί.

CLASSICAL TRIPOS EXAMINATIONS. 12mo. sewed, 2s.

An INDEX of the Phrases contained in ADAM'S ROMAN ANTIQUITIES. 8vo. 2s.

* * * Of those who have been accustomed to the use of the Roman Antiquities by Adam, there are few that have not felt the want of an Index of the Phrases and Passages of Latin Writers, which are explained and illustrated in that work. To the customs and institutions of countries, are always to be referred the most peculiar constructions and expressions of their language: hence, to those who are engaged in reading the Latin Writers, and who may consequently be supposed to have Adam's Roman Antiquities constantly at hand, the Index now submitted to the Public will be found eminently useful. Its utility will be found perhaps still greater to those engaged in practising or teaching Latin Composition.

N. B. The Index will suit any edition of Adam's Roman Antiquities.

BOS (L.) ANTIQUITATUM GRÆCARUM, Descriptio Brevis. 12mo. 3s.

* * * This work is a revised edition of Zœnius's Leipsic, 1787. The name Antiquities is scarcely comprehensive enough, as it refers us to the sources of all our knowledge of the religious, civil, military, and domestic affairs of the Greeks. It contains some thousand references and is a valuable manual to the classical tutor or student, whatever author he may be reading.

CAMBRIDGE EXAMINATION QUESTIONS on ÆSCHYLUS. 12mo. 1s. 6d.

————— on THUCYDIDES. 12mo. 1s. 6d.

————— on XENOPHON. 12mo. 1s. 6d.
